THE INDIANS.

Details of the Slaughter of the Murderers of Bowers' Herdsmen—Fifty-Six Savages Slain.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 14.—The Prescott (Arizona) Union, of June 24, gives the following particulars of the slaughter of fifty-six Apache Indians, at a point near Tonto Creek, in that Territory: "It will be recollected that the cause of the slaughter was the killing of BOWERS & Co.'s herdsmen, and the capture of their herd by the Apaches. The Indians had no sooner obtained possession of the herd than a messenger was dispatched to convey the news of the outrage to the people of Prescott. On receipt of the news a party of eleven citizens started in pursuit of the savages. On arriving at Agua Frio they were joined by a party of five citizens of that valley, and the whole force of sixteen men started on the trail. After proceeding fifty-five miles they met a detachment of the Third Cavalry, under Lieut. CHAS. M. MORTON, which was likewise in pursuit of these Indians. The citizens joined the force under Lieut. MORTON, and the journey was resumed with fresh vigor. After proceeding twenty-five miles, the party went into camp at a late hour of the evening. On the morning of the 8th they again took up the trail, which they followed for twenty miles, and at 1 o'clock P. M. came upon a 'rancheria,' which they quickly surrounded, killing twenty-one of the inmates. Feeling satisfied that there were numerous Indians in the neighborhood, and determined that they should have the least possible time to prepare for battle or to effect a retreat, the command moved quickly forward in search of another 'rancheria.' This they discovered on the following day, after crossing the divide between the Verde and Tonto Creek. A fight at once ensued in which twenty-three Indians were killed. At this place three of the captured horses were discovered, and one was recaptured, and two were killed by the Indians when they discovered that they were about to fall into the hands of the command. From this place they followed the principal trail for three miles, when they discovered three Indians in the distance, mounted on two horses. Two of these were shot dead and the third wounded, and both horses recaptured. The supply of provisions being by this time nearly exhausted, and the distance from Camp McDowell, the nearest military post, upward of fifty miles, it was decided to abandon further pursuit and return at once. The command accordingly took up the homeward journey, arriving at Camp McDowell on the morning of the 12th."

WASHINGTON, July 14.—At the Interior Department that COCHEZ, the great war Chief of the Apaches, who has refused several invitations to visit Washington, will be here before many weeks, though at what precise time is not stated. The authorities seem anxious that this notorious Indian warrior shall have an opportunity to state his grievances in person to the Government officials here, in which case it is not doubted the results will be equally beneficial with those which came from the visits of RED CLOUD, SPOTTED TAIL, LITTLE RAVEN and other distinguished Chieftains of the Northern tribes of Indians.

THE SOUTH.

A Georgia Lawyer on Negro Dominance—Testimony of State Treasurer Angier—Gov. Bullock Assailed.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Judge A. R. WRIGHT, of Georgia, who was examined yesterday before the Kuklux Committee, said:

"If the people of the South can be made to believe that the people of the North will never retrace their steps on negro suffrage, and will perpetuate their efforts to make the black man dominate the white race, I would not stand security for the people of the South if they should ever have a chance to free themselves from such a state of things; but there need be no fear of further rebellion. The Southern people believe the present state of things grows out of the excitement and animosities engendered by the war, and have an abiding faith in the return of reason which time will serve to produce, and that the calm sense of the country will be exerted to bring about a state of feeling and fraternity between the people of the country which nothing else will ever produce, and to which the present management can never contribute."

Dr. ANGIER, Treasurer of Georgia, in his statements before the Kuklux Committee, today, presented facts and figures against Gov. BULLOCK, disavowing political or partisan views. He said the Governor had violated the plain letter of the law in many instances, including the insuring of new State bonds, and his effort to conceal the amount and his disposition of them. The witness said he knew nothing of the Kuklux except from rumor and newspaper reports, never having to his knowledge seen one. He thought lawlessness had exhibited itself in some sections of Georgia as it did at times in every State, and probably always would. He could not say how far it had been political, but concluded it was such in some sections, and that men, both white and black, were now making use of the disguise for private gain and personal revenge, and boys for mischief. He regarded it as a wonder that the people are as quiet and peaceable as they are, with the corruptions and the terrible plunderings, and over 300 pardons by the Governor, a large portion for murder, in some cases before trial. There is no such thing as a general disturbance, and never has been. Many negroes and some whites are addicted to stealing and licentiousness, and this has caused disturbance and violence in some localities. If individual accounts are true, there is a terrible condition of affairs in certain neighborhoods. He thought, however, that the pictures were overdrawn, as they have been proved to be in most cases and in some entirely false. Injured and interested parties were apt to give extravagant accounts, and with unprincipled men this was a cheap and convenient way of making political capital and inducing large rewards for made-up cases. He thought the State Courts were sufficient to restrain lawlessness if the Governor would cease his wholesale pardoning. The rights of the negro were safer in the hands of upright, intelligent white jurors than in those of negro jurors, in the present condition of that race. There was, with some persons, a strong prejudice, and even hatred, against the negro, mostly because of the political rights conferred upon him, but a large portion of the wisest and most substantial men, especially if they are politicians, and have no objection to holding office, are rather pleased that those rights have been conferred to the extent of voting, as it makes more offices, and they will control the negro, and through him gain political representative strength for the South. The South generally admits the legal binding force of the Reconstruction acts and new amendments to the Constitution until changed legitimately, if changed at all, claiming the right of appeal on a judicial negative.

EDWARD C. ANDERSON, Ex-Mayor of Savannah, was also examined. He said the condition of Georgia at the present time was law-abiding and peaceful, and that Savannah was the most peaceful city in the country. On being asked whether the people of that State are loyal, he replied he regarded loyalty as devotion to the maintenance of the law, and in this the people were essentially loyal. They were not hostile to the Government, but were opposed to the Administration as illustrated in the officers sent there to represent it. He did not know of the existence of any Kuklux organization. A General Amnesty bill would be beneficial in every respect. The sentiment toward Northern men is kindly in the extreme. The people wanted Northern men to settle among them. Many are already here, and all comers from that section are received in the most kindly spirit.

Convention of the Louisiana Republican Journalists—Gen. Grant's Administration Sustained.

NEW-ORLEANS, July 14.—The Republican State Press Convention adjourned this morning sine die, after a stormy session. There was a bitter contest throughout the sittings of the Convention between the Warmouth and Dunn factions of the Republican Party. A resolution indorsing the entire State Administration and the measures advocated by the State officials, was voted down by 20 to 14. Resolutions were adopted pledging the newspapers represented to a faithful advocacy of Republican principles as contained in the Chicago platform; declaring that President GRANT has proved himself to be an honest public servant, and, after reciting what has been accomplished by the Administration, pledging the papers to support him for renomination in 1872. They also pledge themselves to assist heartily the Republican State Central Committee in its efforts to allay all factious disquiet in the party. They will advocate retrenchment and economy in the administration of the State Government, a reduction of Executive patronage and power, a remission to the people of their rights directly to control the officers who collect the taxes of the State, and such modification of election, registration and auxiliary laws thereto as will prevent frauds.

THE WASHINGTON TREATY.

Ex-Gov. McDougall, of Canada, Comes Out in Support of the Treaty of Washington—His Reasons.

TORONTO, Ontario, July 14.—Ex-Gov. MCDOUGALL, late Minister of Public Works in Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD'S Government, but now in opposition, has come out in a letter to his constituents in support of the treaty. He takes the ground, that having been ratified by the two high contracting parties, it has the force of law; that no further legislation is necessary to give it effect, and that Canada cannot, if she would, reverse the policy of the Empire, unless she is prepared to quit it. He thinks the guarantee of peace and the opening of the St. Lawrence, which involves the improvement of its navigation by both countries, the great merit of the treaty.

THE TRUMP OF FAME.

Fisk's Fugleman Magnifies his Daring Deeds—How the Fierce Colonel Mingled in the Fray and How he got Out Again.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 14.—Col. JAMES FISK, Jr., Lieut.-Col. BRAINE, Adjt. ALLIEN and the Surgeon of the Ninth Regiment met this evening at the Continental Hotel in reference to regimental affairs, and discussed also the movements of the regiment during the riot of Wednesday. Lieut.-Col. BRAINE is now in command of the regiment, and makes the following report of its doings on the 12th inst:

Col. FISK, having received orders from Brigade Head-quarters to parade his command on Wednesday, 12th inst., immediately promulgated the necessary regimental orders. Soon after the assembling of the corps on the morning of the 12th, Col. FISK received a telegram from Gov. HOFFMAN, commanding him to discontinue the running of the boats of the Twenty-third-street Ferry. The Colonel left for the Grand Opera-house, and telegraphed his order to the Superintendent of the ferry to stop the boats. While writing this order an aid arrived and informed him that the regiment was ready to march. Col. FISK, who, while in the Grand Opera-house, had removed his uniform coat, did not wait to dress, but went at once to the armory and took command, being in his shirt sleeves. Not having his sword with him, Col. FISK was given Major HITCHCOCK'S sabre. He then placed himself at the head of his men, and led them in person, remaining with them during the firing, and until it had ceased. The crowd, attempting to cross the street, rushed past the head of the regiment and knocked Col. FISK down and trampled upon him. After the crowd had passed Col. FISK attempted to rise, but was unable, his foot being severely hurt. He was assisted by his men and carried into a house opposite where he fell. Outside of this house crowds assembled, hooting and yelling, and his friends, deeming his removal necessary to save his life, had the Colonel taken elsewhere.

Lieut.-Col. BRAINE takes occasion to deny that Col. FISK did not command the regiment, and asserts that Col. FISK did his full duty to preserve the public peace, and was foremost in the fray. Lieut.-Col. BRAINE states also that there was no dissatisfaction in the regiment with the Colonel, but on the contrary, he was cheered by the regiment on its return to the armory. Col. FISK did not leave New-York until he was informed that his command was on the march to the armory, and that the mob had been checked. Col. FISK is confined to his room on account of injuries received, and will not be able to leave before a week.

New-Hampshire Legislature — Town War Debts Assumed by the State.

CONCORD, N. H., July 14.—The House, this afternoon, after considerable discussion, passed a bill authorizing the State Treasurer to issue bonds assuming the war expenditures of towns by the State, fixed on the basis of the quota, and the time of service, as provided by the Legislature of 1870. The amount of bonds to be issued under this act will amount to nearly $2,000,000, to bear date of Jan. 1, 1872, interest payable semi-annually.

The State-House at Hartford, Conn.—Money Appropriated and Committee of Construction Appointed.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 14.—In the House today, the resolution appropriating $500,000 for a State-house in Hartford, after some filibustering to delay action, was adopted by 100 yeas to 86 nays. A resolution was passed appointing Gov. Jewell, Senator Buckingham, Hons. Wm. H. Barnum, W. D. Bishop and Judge Shipman, a Committee to superintend the construction of the building. The Committee is restrained from using the appropriation until the City of Hartford shall have appropriated a like amount, and furnished a site for the building. A resolution also passed, authorizing Hartford to issue capitol bonds. These resolutions have now passed both Houses. A resolution, making a like appropriation for New-Haven, was made the special order for Wednesday next. The House adjourned till Monday afternoon, and the Senate till Tuesday morning.

THE COTTON CROP.

Figures from the Department of Agriculture—Conclusions.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The July returns do not materially change the cotton crop prospects reported in June. Severe rain-storms have continued to obstruct cultivation and check growth in the States upon the Gulf coast. The States of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida average lower in condition than at the date of the last report. The Georgia and Texas averages remain unchanged, and an improvement is indicated in the Carolinas, Tennessee, and Arkansas. The percentage of each State, as compared with the July statement of last year, is as follows:

	July, 1870. Per. Cent.	July, 1871. Per Cent.
North Carolina	94	99
South Carolina	96	100
Georgia	101	82
Florida	98	88
Alabama	102	81
Mississippi	95	80
Louisiana	101	75
Texas	97	93
Arkansas	101	90
Tennessee	85	96

While no estimates can at this early date be made, this information leads to the following conclusions:

With a reduction of fourteen per cent. in acreage, the continuance of the present relatively low condition, and a season as long as that of 1870, there should be gathered a crop of 3,300,000 bales, or about as large as that of 1869; with a season of average length, 2,900,000 bales; with an early frost and very unfavorable season for picking, 2,700,000 bales. The prevalence of insects, with other unpropitious circumstances, would probably reduce the crop to 2,500,000 bales, and a steady improvement of the plant for sixty days, with the longest and most favorable picking season, might carry the aggregate up to 3,500,000. This is presented as a fair statement of the range of probabilities, based upon the extensive and reliable data, and uninfluenced by the clamors of the speculators of the Cotton Exchange.

THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

Return of 108 of the Lower California Emigrants to San Francisco—Hanged by Vigilants.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14.—The steamer Colorado, from Panama, arrived today. The Colorado brings 108 more destitute victims of the Lower California swindle. They report that there are about fifty more, including several women, still remaining on the Peninsula, and are anxious to leave. There is no water for the colonists; nothing is being raised, and no work is done. It is reported, on good authority, that the Mexican Commissioners have reported to their Government that the Lower California Company have wholly failed to comply with the conditions of their contract, and are entitled to no relief from Mexico.

GEORGE KIRK, one of the parties banished by the Vigilants of Virginia City, Nevada, having returned, he was hanged by the Committee last night.

Barometer corrected for elevation and temperature.

Synopsis and Predictions.

WASHINGTON, July 15—1 A. M.—The area of low barometer, which was Thursday night north of Lake Ontario, has moved eastward, and is now beyond our stations. The pressure has continued lower than its normal value on the Middle and Eastern States, and is sensibly stationary in the interior of the continent. Rainy and cloudy weather was reported this evening from Alabama to Virginia, but has now entirely cleared away. Threatening weather has prevailed at several stations in the Middle and East Atlantic coast, but is now succeeded by clear weather. Clear weather has prevailed from Lake Ontario westward to the Missouri River since Friday morning.

PROBABILITIES.

The barometer will probably rise in the Middle and Eastern States with light winds and pleasant weather. Partially cloudy and clear weather is probable for the Southern and Gulf States. Falling barometer with increase in cloudiness is probable for the upper lakes. Storms merely local are not considered.

City Meteorological Report.

The following observations show the temperature, &c., yesterday, at the Central Park Mineral Springs, as recorded by SCHULTZ & WARKER:

Atrocious Murder at Port Colden, N. J.

The wildest excitement prevailed yesterday at Washington, New-Jersey, in consequence of a most atrocious murder, which took place Wednesday night at a place called Port Colden, about one mile from there. Col. JOHN PRICE, of Port Colden, was found dead, stabbed in four places, once in the heart. LORENZO D. DOOLITTLE has been arrested on suspicion of being the murderer.

It appears PRICE and DOOLITTLE had a quarrel in a store in Port Colden Wednesday night, which resulted in a personal rencontre. After Col. PRICE left he was followed by DOOLITTLE, and hence the bloody deed is charged to the latter. Both were men of families, and were each about thirty-five years of age.

Madison Square.

The improvement of Madison-square and the roadway opposite to it has been commenced. The size of the square will be reduced slightly. A line will be commenced true with the south-east corner of Broadway and Twenty-third-street. Thence it will curve until it comes out true with the present line of the square at the south-east corner of Fifth-avenue and Twenty-sixth-street. In the area between the square the hotels and the Worth monument there will be two street lamps, with narrow sidewalks around them. The southern part of the inclosure around the Worth monument will be entirely dispensed with. Instead there will be a close, circular railing around the monument, and outside of this a wide sidewalk.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Democratic Libels on the Revenue Bureau Refuted.

Administration of the Revenue Departments—Gen. Pleasonton Neither Removed nor Resigned—The Loan not Withdrawn—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—A great deal has been said in the Democratic papers about the numerous sums which, it is charged, the Government has lost during the present Administration, through the defalcation of tax collectors. MORGAN, of Ohio, charges, in his stump speeches in that State, that the gross amount thus lost is $20,000,000. The recent address of the Democrats in Congress puts the amount at $25,000,000. The simple state of facts is as follows: Collectors of internal revenue are obliged, according to law, to receipt monthly to Assessors for the various lists of taxes turned over to them for collection. The Internal Revenue Bureau charges the aggregate amount of these lists to the collector who receipts for the same until they are accounted for either by money deposited or by claims that cannot be collected. These amounts remain charged to the Assessor, even though he resigns or is removed from office. For instance, John Brown, a Collector, receipts for taxes on lists turned over to him by the Assessor, to the amount of $150,000; when he has collected and deposited $50,000 of the sum, he is removed from office. He turns over to his successor uncollected taxes to the amount of $100,000, but he has received credit here for only $50,000. The uncollected taxes transferred remaining charged to him till his successor has collected them, or accounted for them, by claims which cannot be collected. While this $100,000 is uncollected, BROWN'S accounts in the Revenue Bureau show him to be in default, and still the entire amount may be and usually is collected; and whether it is or not, he is powerless and blameless. By the system of keeping the accounts large balances are found upon the Revenue Bureau books against ex-Collectors who do not owe the Government anything, and it is these balances, which are constantly changing from month to month by the charges of new lists, and the credit of deposits, which the Democratic organs and orators are holding up to the country as defalcations. By an official report, the real cash balances against ex-collectors amount to $2,768,397 83, which is less than one-sixth of one per cent. of the taxes collected under the Internal Revenue laws, and this sum is secured to the Government by good bonds amounting to $10,000,000. Of the total defalcations stated, there are due from collectors appointed by Mr. JOHNSON, $1,813,757 12; from collectors appointed by Mr. LINCOLN, $890,058 95; and from Collectors appointed by Gen. GRANT, $64,586 76, or less than one-fortieth of the whole. The revenue receipts show in the same favorable light. In 1868, Mr. JOHNSON had complete power over the Bureau; spirits were taxed two dollars per gallon; tobacco forty cents per pound, and cotton from two and a half to three cents per pound. There were also taxes on boots, shoes, cloths, clothing, confectionery, furniture, iron, in all its various stages of manufacture, leather and saddlery, sugar, soap, fermented liquors, banks, sales, licenses, and innumerable other objects. The entire receipts for that year, 1868, were only $191,180,564 28. With the beginning of Gen. GRANT'S administration a new tax lawwent into effect. The whisky tax was reduced to fifty cents per gallon, the tobacco tax to thirty-two cents per pound, and all taxes upon cotton boots, shoes, cloths, clothing, furniture, and more than one hundred other articles were removed wholly. With the collections made by JOHNSON as a basis, this was expected to take from the revenue on whisky $13,500,000, tobacco $4,500,000, and by articles made tax free $60,000,000, or $78,000,000 in all. Instead of this reduction, by the appointment of honest officials, and the collections of taxes from rogues who had escaped previously and threw the whole burden upon a few tax-payers. The receipts on whisky were increased $37,000,000 per annum over 1868; on tobacco, $13,000,000, and so on through the list; the $78,000,000 reduction anticipated being prevented by the honest enforcement of the law. In 1868 it cost to collect the revenue, $8,387,793 17; during GRANT'S first year of office it cost $5,916,410 22.

THE INTERNAL REVENUE COMMISSIONER.

Commissioner PLEASONTON has not yet been removed, and consequently no successor has been appointed. While there is reason to expect the resignation of Commissioner PLEASONTON, voluntarily or otherwise, within a few days, it is certain that it has not been tendered yet. Instead of being removed, if a change is to be made, and he does not resign of his own accord, his resignation would probably be asked by the President. Should he not respond to such a request, then it would be time to talk about his removal. But his resignation has not been asked as yet, and so the announcement of his successor must be premature and unauthorized.

THE NEW LOAN.

The reports about the withdrawal of the new loan from the market by the Secretary of the Treasury has only this for a foundation. In view of the limited subscriptions that are making, the Secretary deemed it expedient to reduce the advertising expenses as much as possible, and at the same time have the loan properly advertised. He accordingly telegraphed to Mr. C. C. NORVELL, in charge of the advertising, to delay making the arrangements for the July advertising till he (the Secretary) could consult with him about it. The new loan has not, and will not, be withdrawn from the market, and the advertisement of it will be continued.

THE MOBILE COLLECTORSHIP.

Senator SPENCER still waits here, for the purpose, it is understood, of operating against his recent colleague, Mr. WARNER, who was a few days ago appointed Collector at Mobile, Ala. He had a long interview with Secretary BOUTWELL today, seeking to procure a reversal of the appointment. The character of WARNER'S political support in Alabama was noticed in the dispatches at the time of his appointment, and showed very conclusively that his appointment was well received by the Republican Party of the State; but SPENCER makes him out to be neither a Republican nor an honest man. SPENCER'S candidate is regarded as having had no support except of a personal character from any quarter. At any rate, if SPENCER is staying here in the hope of obtaining a reversal of WARNER'S appointment, till he proves himself incompetent, his time, from present appearances, will turn out to be not well spent.

THE CUBAN GENERAL, CAVADA.

The report of the execution of the Cuban General, CAVADA, July 1, should not be too confidently believed till it receives further confirmation. It was after that date that Consul-General HALL made representations at Havana from our Government, looking toward his release, and Mr. HALL understood that he was alive at that time. If not, the Spanish officers must themselves have been either deceived or deceiving. Advices from Mr. HALL may be expected by mail in a few days.

IMMIGRANTS.

According to returns made to the Bureau of Statistics of the emigrants who arrived at the port of Baltimore during the quarter ending June 30, 1871, the whole number was 5,559, of whom 2,925 were males, and 2,674 females. Of the total number, 5,518 were from Germany. Out of 2,005 males, over fifteen years of age, the occupations of 1,490 are given.

THE CENSUS REPORT.

The Government Printing-office has three presses running upon the first volume of the census report. One hundred and twenty thousand copies have been authorized.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE DARIEN EXPEDITION.

Commander SELFRIDGE, of the Darien expedition, today paid his respects to the Secretary of the Navy, exhibited his maps and plans, and talked with him generally upon the subject. The health of the party during their six months' sojourn on the Isthmus was excellent. With the exception of the loss of one man by consumption, and another by the upsetting of a boat, there were no deaths. The good health is attributed to the sanitary regulations adopted, and to the large supply of wholesome food taken from the United States.

APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

The appointments of JAMES F. HALL, Assistant Appraiser of the Appraiser's Office, and WM. M. MEAD, clerk in the Naval Office at New-York, and JOHN ADAMS, Inspector of Customs at Philadelphia, have been confirmed at the Treasury Department.

OTTAWA UNIVERSITY AGAIN.

The Statements of Mr. Atkinson and Mr. Jones Disjointed and Dissected.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, July 11, 1871.

In the TIMES of July 7, I find two letters, one from Rev. ROBERT ATKINSON, and one from Rev. JOHN T. JONES, both of which begin by attributing to the TIMES the publication of a Washington letter headed "A Speck of Ancient History About Ottawa University." The letter referred to did not have such a heading, but instead there was printed above it in rather bold letters, "An Indian Swindle." This error is not material, of itself, except that it foreshadows pretty exactly the character for correctness of the whole substance of both letters published on the 7th.

There are two good reasons why a reply to these letters ought to be brief. The first is that the Interior Department has had a thorough investigation of the affairs of Ottawa University, and is proceeding against the Board of Trustees, of which Revs. ATKINSON and JONES are members, to compel a fulfillment of their trust. Would the Secretary of the Interior be likely to take measures to compel the fulfillment of a trust unless he had satisfactory evidence that the trust had been betrayed? Since the Department has the case in hand, I am perfectly willing to abide in patience the record of its action to make good the charges which ATKINSON and JONES try to refute. The assurance, too, that the rights of the Ottawas will be protected with all the power of the Government, without any further ventillation by the TIMES of their wrongs, renders the devotion of much space to that object profitless. The second reason for a short reply, is that the specific statements of my letter of the 23d of May are not noticed by ATKINSON and JONES except in one or two instances. If the editor of the TIMES will give further space to this controversy, and these two Trustees will say which of my statements were false, I will then publish sworn testimony and affidavits on official records to establish every material allegation which was made.

Mr. ATKINSON complains of the history having been disjointed. So, doubtless, some of the self-styled ipoets of HORACE'S time—perhaps some of the Indians educated at the University will explain to Mr. ATKINSON who HORACE was—complained when he disjointed their measures, and showed that the disjecta membra were not parts of poetry at all, but were prose. But the post quam discordia tetra, &c., of ENNIUS, was poetry still, however disjointed. No, Mr. ATKINSON is right; his story will not bear dissection.

What Mr. ATKINSON says about the missionary labors of JOTHAM MEEKER, is not inconsistent with my statement that "The Baptist denomination began a praiseworthy and quite successful missionary labor among the Ottawa Indians as long ago as 1823." It is not to the point, however, as I imputed fraudulent dealings with the Indians to nobody till KALLOCK became connected with the history. Now comes the first statement of Mr. ATKINSON, which bears upon the issue:

"In 1862 the treaty referred to above was made, in which the Ottawas set apart 20,000 acres of land, as agreed upon, for the permanent endowment of a school, in which they were to have all their children educated, boarded, clothed and attended in sickness for all time. The school was also to have a white department."

Here are three false statements. Twenty thousand acres of land were not set apart "as agreed upon," (in the trade for Roger Williams University, between its Trustees and the Councilmen of the Ottawas, which ATKINSON gives in extenso.) Secretary USHER would not acknowledge the agreement, and none of its provisions appear in the Treaty of 1862, nor is any reference made to it. The Treaty of 1862 made no provision for having the children "boarded, clothed and attended in sickness." The school was not "to have a white department." The treaty set apart—not gave or bestowed—20,000 acres of land "for the benefit of said Ottawas." In specifying the course of instruction it says: "And to the end that the said Ottawas may derive the greatest advantage from said school," &c. Not a word is said in any of the treaties about a "white department." The trust, which was created solely by the terms of the treaty, was violated the moment a white scholar was permitted to derive any advantage from the original endowment, or from any subscription, in any manner raised, and the continuance of a white department by the present Trustees is a continued betrayal of their trust. If not, the authority for its continuance should be produced. Here is another statement for examination:

"The Trustees agreed to erect school buildings, feed, clothe and educate the children of the nation (about forty in number) between the ages of six and eighteen. Could the proceeds of these 20,000 acres, if sold at that time (1862,) do this? We unhesitatingly answer, No."

The Trustees of Ottawa University agreed to nothing. In the Treaty of 1862, nothing was said about the ages of the children to be educated. The Trustees were simply appointed in a section of the treaty to manage the school according to the terms of the treaty. The treaty says: "And to the end that the said Ottawas may derive the greatest advantage from the said school, the pupils shall be instructed and practised in the industrial pursuits suitable to their age and sex, as well as in such branches of learning as the means of the institution and the capacity of the pupils will permit." To accomplish this simple object was the trust which the Trustees accepted. Was the erection of a building over sixty by forty feet in ground dimensions, and three stories high, with a large corps of teachers, necessary to teach forty children, which the Trustees were not obliged to board or clothe or doctor?

The members of the tribe became dissatisfied as soon as they saw how large a foundation had been laid, and said to the Board through JONES, who acted as interpreter, that they did not want so large a house; that it would not be ready soon enough, and that there was not money enough; but they were assured the "big house" could be built as soon as a smaller one, and that the brethren at the East would help them with money to the amount of $100,000 if needed, and they were deceived and blinded in this way from the beginning, as the sworn testimony of Rev. JOHN TECUMSEH JONES fully sets forth.

Mr. ATKINSON says in his letter that the twenty thousand acres sold for $25,135 91, but in a report made the first of the present month, he confesses his inability to name the amount. Which statement is meant to be correct?

Mr. ATKINSON says most of the $55,000 or $60,000, expended in buildings, improvements of grounds, &c., was raised by subscriptions in the Baptist denomination. In his sworn testimony he says the subscriptions raised by him amounted to $30,447. And no other subscriptions were raised, though HUTCHINSON and KALLOCK spent about $10,000 traveling expenses in a vain effort. The evidence that the balance of the $60,000 was derived from the fraudulent diversion of moneys received for the Ottawa trust lands, and a portion of the school trust lands, is perfectly convincing. Mr. ATKINSON'S salary is paid from the Indian school money, and his traveling expenses while obtaining the subscription, $1,270 88, were paid in the same way. Whether he also had a commission is not stated. Pray, under the terms of the trust, how could he apply these subscriptions for the benefit of others than the Ottawa children? Is a new claim set up growing out of a section relating to the trust in the treaty of 1867? It is expressly stated there that trust shall remain unchanged except as specified; and then, in view of the removal of the tribe under treaty stipulations to the Indian Territory, it is provided, in addition to the former stipulations, that the children of the tribe, between six and eighteen, shall be entitled to be received to said institution, to be subsisted, clothed, educated, and attended in sickness, where the sickness is of such a nature that the patient promises a return to study within a reasonable period; "and to receive such advantages as the means of the institution (not the agreement of the trustees) will permit."

It is the official information of the Indian Office that the Ottawa Indians are in a destitute condition, and, as I stated formerly, the Government is called on by them for assistance to obtain food.

With a few figures from the University accounts, this letter will end. They show pretty clearly how the trust has been guarded. The three last Treasurers, HUTCHINSON, KALLOCK and ATKINSON, have expended for attorney's fees $272; traveling expenses, $12,248 76; salaries, $11,905 46; clerks, $3,585; and for supporting an Indian school seven months in about seven years, $9,741 94. This last item is for salaries of teachers, subsistence of teachers and scholars, temporary school buildings and furnishing, stationery, &c. I am not sure, but think that more white than Indian children were benefited by this meagre expenditure.

If Rev. Mr. JONES had said that he was not an Ottawa Indian at all, but a half-breed that had been adopted into their tribe and ultimately expelled; that he at one time promised to stand by the Indians in getting their rights in the school and subsequently, on his own confession, influenced by ATKINSON had determined to remain on the present Board, of which he has been a member from the beginning, and that he is commonly understood to remain for personal reasons, he would have saved the trouble of a reference to his letter. I saw a paper yesterday, of recent date, signed by thirty-four members of the Ottawa tribe which gives a very different account of their feelings from what JONES imputes to them.

If Mr. ATKINSON wishes to have my name he shall be gratified by addressing the Washington Office of the New-York TIMES, or Mr. Editor, if you think proper, you are at liberty to subscribe it hereto.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

A Masonic banquet took place on Thursday at Ottawa, Canada, in the Curling Rink, at which three hundred of the brethren sat down, among them Sir JOHN MCDONALD, the representative of the Grand Lodge of England. The chair was occupied by Right Worshipful Bro. BARBER, D. D. G. M. of the Ottawa District. All passed off pleasantly, and the company did not break up until an early hour this morning.

R. D. CAMPBELL, a colored Magistrate, of Nashville, Tenn., has been convicted of oppression in office, and sentenced to eight months' imprisonment. The offense consisted in issuing an order committing a prisoner to jail in advance of any trial, and stating in the order that the prisoner had been tried, and that there was cause to believe him guilty of assault and battery.

The funeral services of MARY KIMBALL, wife of L. P. MORTON, of New-York, were read this evening in Dr. POTTER'S church, at Newport. The church was crowded. Rev. Dr. POTTER officiated, assisted by Rev. CANON WHITE. The remains left by the steamer Bristol at 8 o'clock this evening for New-York, to be interred to-morrow in Green-Wood.

The recent vote in Massachusetts on the question of selling malt liquors shows the following result: Total number of cities and towns, 340; prohibiting the sale by a vote of "No," 61; by not voting, 242; by a tie vote, 2; total of towns where sale is prohibited, 305; places where sale is permitted by vote of "Yes," 30; towns not heard from, 5.

PINK AND WHITE TYRANNY. A Society Novel. By Mrs. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE. Boston: ROBERTS BROTHERS.

Although Mrs. STOWE protests in her preface that this is not a novel, but a story with a moral, it would be difficult to detect any tangible difference between the two. It certainly has no very elaborate plot and no mystery whatever, but is simply a picture of social life. The story has been running through the successive numbers of a Boston magazine, and is just completed and put forth in book form. Those who have not cared to take it in installments may wish to know, now that it is finished, what manner of work it is. It is the story of a wealthy young man in a New-England manufacturing village, who is represented as strong, sensible, and high-minded, but who, nevertheless, was fool enough to marry, after a few weeks' acquaintance, a selfish, sprightly, cajoling beauty, incapable of loving any one but herself with any degree of devotion. Unlike most works of fiction, this has the marriage at the beginning, and then concerns itself with the consequences. Lillie keeps up the hallucination in her husband's mind for many months, and he thinks that the flighty and inconsiderate beauty has genuine loveliness and goodness which will assert themselves in time. She deceives him, and wheedles him into allowing her to do and in doing himself many indiscreet things. On every possible occasion she shows her selfish nature, her utter disregard of anything better than dress and show, and all the follies and frivolities of the fashionable life that she was accustomed to before her marriage; and yet he refuses to be disenchanted, until he loses his property, mainly through her extravagance. She, instead of giving him comfort, and helping him to bear misfortunes, pouts and frets, and wishes him to adopt dishonorable expedients to avoid satisfying his creditors, in order that she may continue to live in luxury. Then he comes to see her real nature, and the hopelessness of changing it to anything more true or noble. Of course the revelation makes him wretched, and his after life is one of endurance rather than joy in his home. This single family, with their friends and those with whom they are brought in contact, make up the dramatis personæ of the story. It is written with much of the power for which the author has been distinguished in her former works. The gradual manner in which Lillie establishes her tyranny over the unsuspecting and deluded John is very skillfully portrayed, and the account of her flights to her former associates and their way of life in her Summer sojourn at Newport, and the Winter visit to New-York, is very life-like. The moral is very obvious. The hollowness of fashionable life, and the wickedness, as well as folly, of many of those who pass their days in its unwholesome atmosphere, are revealed with a bold and unflinching hand, and the unhappiness that is likely to follow upon hasty and inconsiderate marriages is vividly exhibited. The best lesson of all is, perhaps, that it is far better to endure the unhappiness which one has thus brought upon himself than to attempt to escape it by committing a still greater wrong, and relieving himself from his marriage obligations. In drawing this moral herself, the writer says:

"It has been surprising to us to see in these times that some people, who really at heart have the interest of women upon their minds, have been so short-sighted and reckless as to clamor for an easy dissolution of the marriage contract as a means of righting their wrongs. Is it possible that they do not see that this is a liberty which, once granted, would always tell against the weaker sex? If the woman who finds that she has made a mistake and married a man unkind or uncongenial, may, on the discovery of it, leave him and seek her fortune with another, so, also, may a man. And what will become of women like Lillie, when the first gilding begins to wear off, if the man who has taken one of them shall be at liberty to cast her off and seek another? Have we not enough now of miserable broken-winged butterflies, that sink down, down, down, into the mud of the streets?"

What manly behavior means in a case like that of John Seymour in this story, is revealed in the comforting words of his sister Grace:

"I know perfectly well," she says, "that there is little hope of personal and individual happiness for you in your marriage for years to come. Instead of a companion, a friend, and a helper, you have a moral invalid to take care of. But, John, if Lillie had been stricken with blindness, or insanity, or paralysis, you would not have shrunk from your duty to her; and, because the blindness and paralysis are moral, you will not shrink from it, will you? * * * Lillie is your wife; you were free to choose, and you chose her. She is the mother of your child; and, John, what that daughter is to be, depends very much on the steadiness with which you fulfill your duties to the mother. I know that Lillie is a most undeveloped and uncongenial person; I know how little you have in common; but your duties are the same as if she were the best and most congenial of wives. It is every man's duty to make the best of his marriage."

So John shouldered the heavy burden, and though his wife's health failed under the unnatural life that she would lead, and she became a "chronic invalid, exacting, querulous, and full of troubles and wants which taxed the patience of all around her," his faithfulness never faltered. Before she died, she came to see the folly and the wrong of her life, and to appreciate her husband's worth; but then it was too late to make him amends, though not to enjoy the satisfaction of his forgiveness and his tender devotion. So she passed away, and in the widowed home a younger Lillie presided, "fairer and sweeter than she—the trusty confidant, the trusted friend of her father." This story will be found well worth reading, for the interest that it will excite as well as for its wholesome lessons in matters of social and domestic life.

TORS CLAVIGERA. LETTERS TO THE WORKMEN AND LABORERS OF GREAT BRITAIN. By JOHN RUSKIN. New-York: JOHN WILEY & SON.

This new work of Mr. RUSKIN will be welcome to his many admirers, for it contains his peculiarities, both of style and thought, in a somewhat concentrated form. It consists of six pamphlets, dated successively on the first day of each month, from January to June inclusive, of the present year. Although addressed to the "workmen and laborers," of course they are intended quite as much for the perusal of what are known as the influential and the governing classes, and contain much of the peculiar political philosophy and Utopian views of what society ought to be, which characterize Mr. RUSKIN'S writings. The style has a studied simplicity, which brings it within the comprehension of the unlettered, and at the same time makes it attractive to the educated reader. The object of the essays appears to be to remind the English people of their numerous faults, and to show them how, according to the notion of Mr. RUSKIN, they might be far better off than they are. His suggestions, however excellent they might be if carried out, have generally the peculiarity that there is not the slightest hope that they will be realized in any such material and practical age as the present. He says: "I should like to destroy most of the railroads in England and all the railroads in Wales. I should like to destroy and rebuild the Houses of Parliament, the National Gallery, and the east end of London; and to destroy, without rebuilding, the new town of Edinburgh, the north suburb of Geneva, and the City of New-York." Another thing that he would like, but cannot have, is a "Parliament into which people might be elected on condition of their never taxing anything about politics." He expresses his great antipathy to railroads, machinery, and other modern contrivances, which are believed to be destructive of poetry, but productive of wealth. He thinks they are productive chiefly of idleness and selfishness, and seems to have conceived a peculiar dislike to cast-iron. He goes on, in a very pleasant way, to find fault with things as they are, and to lay down the basis of an ideal condition of society which would probably be very delightful, but which is totally impracticable. The book is very agreeable reading, and no doubt contains much real wisdom, as it certainly does many beauties of thought and language.

THE ISLAND NEIGHBORS. A Novel of American Life. By ANTOINETTE BROWN BLACKWELL. New-York: HARPER & BROS.

Mrs. BLACKWELL, who has hitherto been known chiefly as an advocate of the unsatisfied claims of woman, of one sort or another, now makes her appearance as a novelist, and the result fully justifies the change in her vocation, and makes one wish for her own sake and that of the public that it might be permanent. Not that her success as a novelist is brilliant; but she displays considerable talent in representing scenes from life, and has produced a book much more creditable to her than anything she has done or can hope to do as a public speaker. The Island Neighbors is a story of Summer life by the sea. A wealthy Boston family goes to one of the islands which lie off the New-England shore, the father seeking for a restoration of health and the others eager for holiday enjoyments. The book is a record of their life and experience during the Summer, and their association with the rustic half-farmer, half-sailor people who lived about them. There are many life-like sketches of adventures and sports, such as bathing, fishing, pic-nicking, gathering shells, &c., which make up in a great measure the recreation and the toil of this vacation life at the sea shore. Of course, through all runs the delicate thread of a love story. In the Boston family is a girl of Irish birth, who, though originally employed as a servant, has, on account of her fidelity and good sense, come to be regarded as a companion for the lady, a nurse for the children, and almost as an equal by every member of the family. One of the neighbors on the island was an honest, sturdy young farmer, sailor and fisherman. The fates decided that these two were made for each other, but Mr. Warner, the employer of Margaret, was of a different opinion, and hence arose a contest in which Warner, of course, got the worst of it in the end, but caused a good deal of misunderstanding and trouble in the meantime. The experiences of these young people, the natural jealousies and misunderstandings of their life, while allowed little chance for communication, and the final satisfaction of their hearts, form the staple of the story. It is wrought out in a clear and natural manner, and though none of the incidents are marvelous, and none of the characters remarkable, they are all interesting, and form the material of a very readable novel.

The "North American" for July.

The degree to which questions of political reform are occupying the minds of thoughtful men is shown in the fact that two of the five main articles in the North American Review for July are on this class of subjects. The one by Mr. WELLS on "Revenue Reform" has already been referred to in the TIMES. The other, by Mr. EDWIN STANWOOD, is addressed to the "Forms of Minority Representation." It is a clear analysis of the essential characteristics of the schemes for securing minority representation, and an acute criticism of their merits. Mr. STANWOOD includes all these contrivances under one of three heads: 1. The limited vote. 2. The cumulative vote, and, 3d, the single vote. To the first class belong all plans which allow the elector to vote for a fixed number of persons less than the whole number to be chosen. This was the mode of electing the Board of Supervisors of the City of New-York, when it early came to grief from the fact that the Democrats, by dividing their forces and nominating two sets of candidates, could easily elect both. This plan was also adopted in the election of the Court of Appeals under the amendment to the Constitution of the State of New-York, where it worked well, the two parties being made equal in numbers. It is evidently a plan of only limited utility, and liable, by changes in the relative strength of parties, to defeat the objects of its originators.

The second class includes all laws which give the voter a certain number of votes to be distributed as he pleases. This contrivance was adopted in the election of the School Board for London, under the Education act recently enacted by the British Parliament. Mr. STANWOOD condemns it on the strength of its operation in that case, which he shows to be as follows: It stimulated waste of votes. Miss GARRETT, who led the poll in Marylebone, received enough votes to have elected two more of the seven members from that borough. In the Birmingham Board, where an effort was made to economize votes to the utmost, it overreached itself, and two-thirds of the voters only elected two-fifths of the Board. In London generally the Catholic minority, being better disciplined, were relatively far the best represented—one-twelfth of the voters electing one-seventh of the members in some districts. The writer, by a process which we cannot here describe, shows that in small as in large constituencies, this method of voting is liable to two abuses: Either by waste of the votes of a majority, to give the minority the actual or relative superiority; or else, in avoiding this waste, to give rise to a degree of party discipline such as we have never dreamed of in this country. This method, it will be remembered, has been incorporated in the Illinois Constitution, and has been adopted in borough or local elections, in a number of instances, by the Legislature of Pennsylvania.

To the third class belong all plans which allow each vote to count for only one of several persons on the ballot, although more than one are to be chosen. The voters indicate the order in which they would prefer the names on the ballot. All the votes cast are divided by the number of persons to be elected, and all receiving the number of votes equal to this quotient are elected. If any receive more than this number, the surplus is given to the candidate next in order of preference. This is the "Hare" method. It is excessively complicated, in the opinion of Mr. STANWOOD, affords opportunities for fraud in counting, and makes the filling of vacancies difficult. Considering these defects in the methods so far presented, it is Mr. STANWOOD'S opinion that, rather than adopt them, "political philosophers should turn their attention to the problem of inducing parties to put forward good and honest men, of emancipating them from the influence and control of Rings; of educating the people to take an interest in primary elections, to insist on good nominations and to bolt relentlessly all that are bad, and we shall get good government without minority representation, or we can adopt a new system without danger." The task which Mr. STANWOOD here sets for political philosophers is a huge one.

The other articles in the North American are: "The Genesis of Species," a very caustic review from the Darwinian side of ST. GEORGE MIVART'S criticism of DARWIN, in which Mr. WRIGHT finds fault with Mr. MIVART'S facts and his logic, and his interpretation of DARWIN, and conveys the impression that Mr. MIVART had, wittingly or unwittingly, set up a sort of straw figure of Mr. DARWIN, and that its demolition is not creditable to the demolisher; a fine review of the present condition of our knowledge of the religion of the ancient Romans, by Mr. WILLIAM F. ALLEN; a review in some detail, and not wholly favorable, of the reports of the recent exploration of Palestine, by Dr. THOMPSON, of New-York; a very sharp critique on MAX MULLER'S translation of the "Rig Veda," and the usual critical notices, which are always good.

Gen. N. B. FORREST is out in a letter in which he manifestly inclines to advise that the South should hold State conventions, and offer to vote in the future with that party which will deal most liberally with their people. And a Democratic paper in Kentucky is sad because it finds that this idea is evidently strong with many of its best Southern exchanges, they seeming to think that it is, "without doubt preferable to the policy proposed by the prophets of the new departure, and that the good effected by it will be much more immediate and lasting."

Alluding to the defense given by Mr. BRET HARTE'S friends against the criticisms showered upon his Phi Beta Kappa poem at Cambridge, the New-Bedford Mercury says: "We learn that Mr. HARTE was informed that the celebration was on the 27th of June, and that he certainly knew this fact. Some better reason therefore should be given, why Mr. HARTE disappointed the large audience which so flatteringly greeted his appearance, and did such injustice to himself."

A party of Irish boys and young men drove out of a park in Toledo, Ohio, on Thursday, the members of the Sabbath-school connected with St. John's Episcopal Church in that city, who were enjoying a picnic. They first insulted the pastor, Rev. N. R. HIGH, and annoyed the members of the school. One struck a young lady on the face, and others took the mallets away from croquet players, &c. Stones were thrown by parties outside the park fence. The remonstrances of Rev. Mr. HIGH and others availed nothing. There were no Policemen near the grounds to quell the disturbance, and the rioters had it all their own way.

On Wednesday morning a party of Norwegians, nearly all children, being about to start on an excursion by steamer, at Chicago, displayed the Stars and Stripes and the Norwegian flag. The latter was a very small flag, yellow in color. Some Irishmen on the wharf took offense at the flag, and, boarding the steamer, impudently demanded that it should be hauled down. The Captain, fearful that, unless he complied, some of the children or other passengers might get hurt, obeyed, and then sent for the Police. On arriving, the latter immediately gave orders for the flag to be again hoisted. The little "Jack" was run up, and the Irishmen went away grumbling bitterly.

Archbishop JOHN B. PURCELL, of Cincinnati, in conversation on Wednesday evening, said he concurred fully in the words of advice given by Archbishop MCCLOSKEY to the Catholics of New-York in regard to the procession, and added that it was easy for the Archbishop to give good advice, which he was powerless to enforce. As to the right of the Orangemen to march in procession through the streets, he said there could be no question in this country. Their right to do so was undoubted. The course taken by Mayor HALL and Superintendent of Police KELSO he regarded as very indiscreet. "Oh, the poor Irish," he said, "they are all flurry and hurry, but I take notice that somebody else does the shooting, and it is they that get shot."

The great express robbery case at Columbus, Ohio, was ended on Wednesday by the BRADLEY brothers pleading guilty, and being sentenced to four years in the Ohio Penitentiary. Before the robbery the elder brother, who was an employe of the Company, sustained an excellent reputation. The robbery was committed on the 16th of May, and the amount taken was $40,683. The two employes of the Company in the office at the time, one of whom was the elder BRADLEY, were, it was alleged, "chloroformed" by the robbers. Of the younger brother, it is said that one can detect at a glance that he is one of those whom people call "fast." But the elder has a look of good intentions that puzzles one to think that he could possibly be guilty of the great crime with which he was charged. It is believed it was their first crime.

The Democrats of New-Hampshire wished to remove the Judge of Probate in Sullivan County, and one of them told Senator SMITH, who is the object of so much solicitude on their part, that the Judge was in the habit of getting intoxicated. The Senator made a little investigation for himself, and when the motion for the removal was made, rose to a personal explanation, in which he said: "I thought, in justice to myself and to Mr. ALLEN, that I should make inquiry in regard to the charge, and I have taken considerable pains to do so. I did not go to his political friends to obtain information in regard to the charges, but to those who favored his removal, and I did not find the first person who would acknowledge that he had ever heard any such reports in regard to his habits. It was said by those who desired his removal that they asked for it upon political grounds only; he was a Republican and they wished to have him removed for that reason." Then the vote was taken; Senator SMITH, as an honest man ought, voted against the resolution, and it was lost.

The Insult to the Italian Flag in San Francisco.

Of the troubles in San Francisco on the 5th inst., growing out of the display of an Italian flag, the Bulletin gives this brief account: "At the head-quarters of the Garibaldian Guard, No. 738 Montgomery-street, the Italian flag has been floated for several days past. It bore the inscription: 'Viva Italia; Roma Capitale.' The latter sentiment being expressive of enmity to the temporal power of the Pope, excited the ire of many Catholics, and yesterday afternoon, about 4½ o'clock, four Irishmen went to the building and demanded that the flag be taken down. They were informed that it would not be, as the Italians had a right to fly their national colors. The Italians say the Irishmen threatened that if it was not lowered they would return with numbers and take it down by force. This, of course, incensed the Italians, and the alarm being given, Republicans and Monarchists flocked by the dozen to the armory. In the meantime, Mr. SPLIVALO, the President of the Company, made a complaint to Chief CROWLEY of the insult and threatened outrage on their flag, and desired to know whether they would have to protect themselves. Chief CROWLEY informed them that they would receive full protection of the law, and cautioned them against taking any steps which should provoke a breach of the peace.

Last evening, about 9 o'clock, nearly a hundred Italians formed a procession at the armory, and with fife and drum, and their own flag and the American colors at the head of their column, they marched through the principal streets, shouting 'Viva l'Italia,' 'Roma Capitale,' 'Down with the Pope.' It was feared a rupture between them and the Irish would take place, but the procession passed unmolested and gained their hall in peace. The offense which provoked this demonstration was certainly ill-advised; but the fact that the demonstration was productive of no retaliatory acts, tends to show that the offense was not countenanced by the majority of the Catholics."

Sleepy Hollow Tragedy—The Trial of Buckhout Continued—Important Testimony.

The most important testimony adduced yesterday, in behalf of BUCKHOUT, the murderer of Sleepy Hollow, was that of Dr. BROWNE, the Superintendent of the lunatic asylum at Bloomingdale.

Dr. BROWNE testified that he had filled his present position for nineteen years, during which period there had been an average of 170 patients under his charge; that he had previously assisted in the management of the State Lunatic Asylum of Vermont and the New-York State Lunatic Asylum at Utica. He had likewise studied the views of those medical men who had made the subject of insanity a specialty. After explaining the various phases of insanity and the expedients which medical men resorted to in order to determine whether the cases of presumed insanity presented for their investigation were real or feigned, Dr. BROWNE proceeded to state that, prior to the second trial of BUCKHOUT, he accompanied Dr. CHOATE, of Massachusetts, to see BUCKHOUT in the County Jail, and judging from the acts and conversations of the prisoner on that occasion, he was of the opinion that BUCKHOUT was insane.

In a rigid cross-examination by Mr. O'SULLIVAN, Dr. BROWNE testified that he believed that insane persons were frequently aware that their acts were legally wrong, but justified themselves in the commission of them, and that sane men would justify their acts of crime in like manner when they were also fully aware that their acts were criminally wrong. During the conversation with BUCKHOUT, the prisoner told him that his wife had been intimate with CHAS. RENDALL and Mr. MAITLAND, and that Mr. RENDALL, senior had used his influence in getting young MAITLAND into his (BUCKHOUT'S) house as a boarder.

In answer to a question put to Dr. BROWNE by Mr. CLINTON, to the effect that if it could be shown that BUCKHOUT, after leaving home on the plea that Mrs. BUCKHOUT would let him have no more money, and that he was without a home, and on learning that Mrs. BUCKOUT was about instituting proceedings for a divorce from her husband, the latter should immediately return home and renew his former friendly relations with his wife, he did not consider that circumstance as strong evidence of sanity on the part of BUCKHOUT, Dr. BROWNE remarked that he should.

Two other witnesses, AUGUST and CHRISTINA CYPHER, were again examined for the defense, but no new facts were elicited. The counsel for defense rested their case, when counsel for the prosecution commenced the introduction of rebutting testimony, but after examining two unimportant witnesses, the Court adjourned until Monday morning.

In consequence of the trial of BUCKHOUT encroaching upon next week, the July term of the County Court and Court of Sessions for Westchester County, which was to commence on Monday next, has necessarily been postponed until the Monday following, 24th inst.

ALONG THE COAST.

Unfashionable Watering-Places—The Connecticut Coast—Indian Hunting-Grounds—Branford—Fishing, Sailing, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BRANFORD, Conn., Tuesday, July 11, 1871.

Between the Connecticut River on the one hand and the Housatonic on the other, the Connecticut shore line abounds in what may be termed unfashionable watering-places—quiet, unpretending, comfortable places where people go really for rest and to do as they like during the warm Summer months. And if they do not succeed in attaining both objects, it is their own fault. It is creditable to the common sense of New-Yorkers that they are gradually awakening to the fact that an endless round of dissipation is not absolutely necessary to enable them to keep cool; that there is more pleasure and comfort in being in old clothes, and as few of them as the laws will permit, than arrayed in gorgeous apparel; that the needed rest and recreation are quite as likely to be found when within hearing of the gentle murmurings of the Sound at Indian Neck, or Guilford, as when listening to the roaring of the mighty ocean at Newport or at LONG Branch. Being neither a moralist nor a philosopher, but only a humble seeker of pleasure and recreation in my own way, I will not attempt to account for that perversity of taste which leads men to seek the great city-like watering-places instead of the quieter comforts of the smaller resorts. I hold my hands up in holy horror and exclaim: Alas! even while a ticket for Newport lies safely in my pocket-book.

New-London is the largest and the best known of the different points on the Connecticut coast. It is a popular place, always lively, always full, always pleasant—for a time. Many have built themselves cottages here, and already it is becoming a sort of a second edition of Newport. So far as prices are concerned, it has already attained a perfection of imitation that would astonish even the original. During the visit of the Yacht Club, which almost always occurs early in their annual cruise, New-London can rival the gayest of the gay, and the corridors and parlors of the Pequot echo nightly to the music of the band and the steps of the dancers. Coming south, we pass Guilford Point, Sachem's Head, Pine Orchard, Indian Neck, Branford Point, Double Beach, Savin Rock, Stratford, Charles Island, &c., all pleasant places, and annually well filled with their quota of visitors.

But the pleasantest point of all, to my liking, is Indian Neck, where I have spent many pleasant days. The place itself is a peninsula, extending out into the Sound from the quaint old town of Branford, and forming one of the arms by which is formed the rocky haven known as Branford Harbor. All around this locality were located the fishing-grounds of the Indians. The land on the Neck is owned by the First Ecclesiastical Society of Branford, and the way in which they became possessed of the property is rather curious. Briefly told by a writer of unquestioned authority, it appears that Branford was settled in 1644, and the title confirmed by the Governor in 1685, with the exception of the land known as Indian Neck, which was reserved for the Indians. The Ecclesiastical Society hold title to Indian Neck by grants from the town and the proprietors, and by purchase from the Indians. In 1722, the proprietors in town meeting made a grant to the Society of certain lands, including a portion of Indian Neck. From that time up to 1743, the Indians made several conveyances to the Society, so that it now owns in perpetuity over 200 acres of land. If it be any consolation to the Summer visitor to know that he is living on "sacred soil," let him make a bold strike for Indian Neck, the land of the "First Ecclesiastical Society."

On the neck, and on high ground, within a few rods of the water's edge, stands the Montowese Hotel, deriving its name from the illustrious son of the great Sachamore, MATTABESETT. Tradition fails to tell whether this copper-colored brave ever spent much of his time in this spot. Doubtless, however, it was a favorite playground for himself and his companions. Besides, it adds interest to the scene to sit by the water's edge, fanned by a cool breeze, shaded from the sun by the wide-spreading trees and watching the antics of the children, to think that two centuries ago Indian warriors wielded the tomahawk or smoked the calumet. At any rate, Indian bones are constantly found beneath the surface of the soil, so that if MONTOWESE was not there himself, he was there by proxy. The hotel, with the Indian name, is one of the best kept and most comfortable places of the kind to be found at any similar point. It will accommodate about 125 guests, just enough for a pleasant company, not enough to constitute a crowd. Near to the hotel is a handsome cottage, belonging to Mr. THOMAS R. TROWBRIDGE, and beyond it another, belonging to Mr. BEACH, of Branford. The fishing here is capital; but to be successful, an early morning start is necessary, which latter operation is altogether too painful to be often submitted to by the indolent. For sailing you have the whole Sound before you, with an occasional trip to the "Summer City," laid out on Capt. KIDD'S money island. Here, it is said, the old free-booter buried his treasure. A fine beach affords every opportunity for bathing, and the drives to different points along the coast, to Pisquebaugh Lake, to Guilford Point, to the Twin Lakes, (if you don't lose your way and have a fair driver,) are varied and charming enough for any one. Then it is but a few minutes' ride from New-Haven, and but a little over three hours from New-York.

A word more. The hotel is kept without a bar, which keeps it free from objectionable characters, though ladies can get their favorite drinks by an early application to the proper authorities. In short, Indian Neck is a charming place for a tired man (or woman) to spend a few quiet weeks of rest and comfort. Several New-Yorkers are there already with their families, and more arrive daily. Mr. Seward in Egypt—His Journey up the Nile.

Another of Miss RISLEY'S graphic private letters describing incidents of Secretary SEWARD'S tour in the East, is printed in the Fredonia Censor. It gives the experiences of the little party on its trip up the Nile, and accounts of the ruins of the temples they visited. They reached Assouan, Nubia, on the 21st of May. There they tarried, and the 23d Miss RISLEY writes:

"This morning we got up at 3 o'clock, and rode five miles on donkeys to Philæ to see the ruins of a beautiful temple, which is modern in comparison with the others we have seen, but one of the finest ruins in Egypt seen at a distance. It is built on an island a mile long, and nearly covers it. We got into a 'dahabeen,' intending to come down the cataract, but the wind blew so hard that we thought it would be unsafe; so after looking at it some time we went ashore. It is not much of a cataract, only wild rapids.

Last evening we were going a short distance to see an obelisk which had fallen, so OLIVE and I thought it would be pleasant to ride a camel. We got on to one and enjoyed ourselves quite well, but they make such an effort and so much motion in getting up and down, and we were so much afraid we might be thrown, I sincerely hope I may never be compelled to ride one. When we came home we found our pet, the monkey, cutting up all sorts of tricks. He was more lively than usual, but soon became so stupid, and walked so unsteadily, that we were afraid he had been poisoned, but on inquiry learned that he had stolen a bottle of Chateau yokem, taken out the cork, and drank half the contents of the bottle. No wonder he was tipsy.

I have said nothing about the heat, which has been intense, the thermometer having been 120 and 130 degrees. I believe that after living through it, keeping well, I could live in a red-hot oven. The flies are swarming in thousands, and as I write my left hand is occupied in trying to keep them away.

The scenery on the Nile is not in the least pretty. It is nothing but desert, with now and then a cultivated spot, or an occasional clump of date palms, and from five to ten miles back, low sand-stone hills, without a particle of green, and it is the same from Cairo to this place. It is low water now, but I don't imagine the scenery is any prettier in Winter; still it has been a glorious trip, and I have enjoyed it beyond expression. We are now on our way back, and expect to reach Cairo in a few days."

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Prophecy Fulfilled.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Before I was out of my teens, forty years ago, or more, I was on a visit to Harrisburg, the capital of Pennsylvania, and during my stay there was induced to attend an evening lecture by the eccentric LORENZO DOW, who was widely known throughout the country. I see distinctly before me now that venerable man, with his flowing beard, his flashing eye, and his slouchy and peculiar dress. His subject was "Catholicism." He had but a few hearers, and those were probably more interested in the eccentricities of the man than in his prophetic utterances. He told his hearers that the American people were in great danger from the Irish Catholics, who were plotting in various ways to get possession of our country. All sorts of influences were to be brought to bear in the prosecution of the plot. It was to be conducted insidiously, not openly. The Jesuits were to play a special part. Seminaries for the education of young ladies were to be in full blast, with the hope of gradually converting them to the Catholic faith. The same agency was to be employed more or less in seminaries for young men. Asylums or Houses of Refuge were to be established for orphans and all destitute children with the determination to make each one of them a convert to the Catholic religion. Money was to be obtained by begging or otherwise of the Protestants for this apparently charitable purpose, and thus the Protestants were to be made to cut their own throats. I do not remember a tithe of what the speaker said upon the occasion, but I remember well his prophetic warnings. I little dreamed at the time that I should live to see such a fearful riot as we had in New-York City in 1863. Nor did it ever occur to me that any of my Protestant brethren, without reference to their sectarian views, would be forbidden to march in peaceful procession through our public streets. The revolution predicted by the seer or prophet whom I have quoted is at hand. The gauntlet of defiance has been thrown down, and we will be false to ourselves and our liberties—civil as well as religious—if we do not take it up. If we would not be worse than slaves, let us not wait till we are bound hand and foot in chains. Religious dogmatism and intolerance I have ever abhorred. Petty religious feuds serve to demoralize rather than to exalt the human character; nay, they often convert us into fiends, as we have seen today. Let Catholic and Protestant alike enjoy their religion untrammeled.

PROTESTANT.

WEDNESDAY, July 12, 1871.

A Query.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Being an out-of-towner who does not read all the papers, and consequently may have skipped some of the news, I am led by a desire to keep posted to ask for a little information. In this morning's TIMES you give a concise and comprehensive account of the recent disturbances in New-York City, but there is still one point that you have not cleared up, and that is as to who started, encouraged, and brought on the riot? I find that nearly all the accounts agree in saying that A. O. H. did it. The meetings were held at A. O. H's Head-quarters; the speeches were all made by an A. O. H.; a long letter was written to somebody by A. O. H. people who tried to see A. O. H. couldn't find him, it, or them, and so I'm left in the dark as to the identity of the riotous instigator. Initials are sometimes convenient, but often lead to confusion, and in this case it seems to me that the "truth of history" requires that such confusion should be avoided. I therefore ask you to solve for me this enigma:

Does A. O. H. mean ABRAHAM OAKEY HALL, or, Any Old Hibern-ye, or, Ancient Order of Hibernians? Which is it, or is it both, or all?

Yours, BERGEN.

The Iron Mountain Railroad Company.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A telegram from St. Louis, in your paper of this morning, states: "The County Collector today seized thirteen locomotives belonging to the Iron Mountain Railroad Company for nonpayment of $60,000 taxes." Being absent from that city, I desire to state that this is a surprise to me and to every officer of the Railroad Company. The Assessor of Taxes stated to me that he knew of no law authorizing an assessment of our road, and no demand has been made upon us, to my knowledge. We claim an exemption from taxation under a clause in the original charter of the road of Jan. 25, 1837, which declares, in so many words, that "the stock of said Company shall be exempt from all State and county taxes," and another clause of the charter, declaring that "all the engines, cars, wagons, machines and other property belonging to said Company shall be deemed a part of the capital stock of said Company." The new Constitution of the State makes all property liable to taxation, and the question is raised whether the old charter of the new Constitution prevails in this case.

The Collector will be enjoined, and, if possible, made to answer in damages.

Very respectfully, THO. ALLEN,
President St. Louis and Iron Mountain Railroad.
No. 120 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, }

A Hint to the Mayor.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It would be needless to say that every respectable citizen applauds the manly, outspoken course of the TIMES during the exciting scenes through which we have recently passed. Will you permit an old reader and an occasional correspondent to make a suggestion, viz.: That Mayor HALL and his legal adviser, CHAS. O'CONNOR, seek a more congenial climate where a Protestant has no rights that a Romanist is bound to respect. I entertain no doubt that most of our citizens would bid them farewell with great pleasure. 1776.

A WHISKY RIOT.

Lively Time in the Fifth Ward Brooklyn—Raid by Marines and Revenue Officials—Three of the Latter Shot.

Notwithstanding the efforts of the revenue authorities the illicit whisky men continue to carry on their nefarious traffic in the Fifth Ward of Brooklyn with success. These stills produce the abominable liquid by the gallon, and the various gin-mills sell it in open defiance of all law. Within the past year, at least a dozen distinct raids have been made upon this locality, but while partial success has attended each of these efforts at suppression, the traffic has been again and again renewed, until today it stands upon almost as firm a basis as ever. Recognizing this fact, Gen. JOURDAN, the Assessor of the district, determined on Thursday night to administer a blow to the traffic from which it would not soon recover. Accordingly he summoned all the revenue officials to his aid, and at an early hour yesterday morning started for the scene of operations. At 3 A.M. Gen. JOURDAN was at the Navy-yard gate with thirty Deputy Assessors, eight Deputy Marshals and one gauger under his command. His presence at this point was at once communicated to the authorities in the Hard, and they, subject to previous agreement, speedily swelled the force by an addition of fifty marines, under the command of Col. BROWN.

All things being ready, the men were divided into squads of about half a dozen each, and dispatched by different routes to concentrate upon the salient point. After much maneuvring they met at a point known as GORMAN'S distillery, in Dickson's-alley; but here, to their astonishment, they found that their approach had been foreshadowed, and the still removed. They had, however, the poor satisfaction of knowing, by feeling of the furnace, that the still could not have been taken away more than half an hour before, because the bricks were still warm. Failing to capture the still the next thing to do was, if possible, to capture the owner, but in this they were also frustrated, for GORMAN, having by some means learned of their approach, had cleared out, and his residence, which was in the vicinity of the distillery, was found empty.

Failing in this, as in their other effort, the company next betook themselves to the residence of PATRICK MCMAHON, in the same vicinity, against whom they had a warrant. Here they were more successful, for, although he learned of their approach in time to make an effort at escape, one of the deputies succeeded in getting sight of him, and, by judicious use of his revolver, succeeded in bringing him to bay, and after a little swearing induced him to surrender. This he did, however, not with any great grace, for he, in his night-shirt, first jumped out of a second-story window, and leaped over several adjoining sheds before giving up; and when he did surrender himself it was only when the last alternative of death stared him in the face.

From this point the officers next proceeded to the residence of an illicit distiller named CASSIDY, at the corner of York-street and Hudson-avenue, but before reaching his house they were ambuscaded on York-street by a company of roughs and boldly fired into. The assailants were all in a crouching position, and thus, while partially concealed, had a splendid opportunity to pick off the officials who stood in the open glare of the lamp-light. Despite this fact, however, the marines and the revenue officers lost no time in replying briskly to the shots of their assailants with powder and ball, and that they were not without effect in their efforts was evidenced by repeated groans from the party in ambuscade, as one or other of the party was struck. After about five minutes, pretty sharp fighting the outlaws determined to a abandon the field, and with a rush they at once carried themselves off in the direction of the river. Seeing this Gen. JOURDAN ordered his men to advance and surround the house of CASSIDY. This was done with great promptitude, and that worthy gentleman, before he knew what the disturbance was about, found himself in the hands of the authorities. At first he felt like resisting, but seeing that there was no hope for escape he and companion MCMAHON, quietly submitted, and were carried to the United States Marshal's office. This ended the fight, and the officers dispersed and went to their homes. After the disturbance was over it was discovered that CLINTON GILBERT, one of the United States gaugers, was shot through the abdomen, and wounded so severely that his life was deemed in danger. Another bullet struck Capt. SELYEAR in the ankle of the right foot, and injured him so severely that it will be some time before he will be able to walk with ease, while a third shot injured the hand of Deputy Assessor WEEKS. Altogether, the affair was one of the most desperate of the kind that has occurred in the City for years, and the effectiveness with which the outbreak was met and quelled by the officials are of the most satisfactory character.

Yesterday afternoon the arrested men, CASSIDY and MCMAHON, were brought before a United States Commissioner and held in $5,000 bail each to answer on the 18th inst.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

A Hardware-Store and Tenement-House Consumed in Jersey City—Narrow Escape of Twelve Families—Loss $40,000.

At 4 o'clock yesterday morning the solemn warning of the fire bell denoted that a fire had broken out in Newark-avenue. The Police first observed smoke escape from the basement of the building, the first and second stories of which were occupied by the TERHUNE BROTHERS, hardware dealers, and the third, fourth and fifth were tenanted by twelve families. In quick time the flames spread rapidly and licked up everything within their devouring reach. The firemen worked with all their might, two or three companies particularly directing their energies to keep the fire from spreading to the adjoining buildings. By the time the store was burning inside the unhappy folks in the upper stories began to appear with little naked children tugging at the skirts of half-dressed mothers, the latter imploring the sympathizing crowd of spectators beneath, in the most piteous tones, to save them. A few escaped by the stairs, but the smoke soon became so dense and stifling that egress by that route was cut off. The first man brave enough to rush to the rescue of these creatures was Ex-Chief Engineer COYLE, of the old Fire Department, who heroically dashed up four flights of stairs, and returned with two children under his arms and a woman on his back. Others, inspired by COYLE'S example, ascended the burning pile, and rescued thirteen. The remainder of the inmates escaped by the firemen's ladders or the back windows. These unlucky people, thus rendered temporarily homeless, wore scarcely any covering, and all that they possessed of this world's goods perished in the flames. There was no fire-escape attacked to this house, and all those families were huddled together in rooms more resembling prison-cells than human habitations. The firemen's conduct was much applauded.

The Chief Engineer ascertaining that the basement of the warehouse contained some barrels of kerosene, ordered it to be flooded with water. At 5 o'clock the flames were mastered so far as to ensure safety to the surrounding buildings. The interior of the hardware-store was completely gutted, and much damage was done by water. The origin of the conflagration is doubtful, and many opinions have been advanced regarding it, but an investigation may reveal the true cause. Mr. TERHUNE is insured for about one-half his loss in the following New-York companies: Market, $5,000; Sterling, $5,000; Lafayette, $4,500; Hamilton, $2,500; New-Amsterdam, $2,500; Metropolitan, $2,500—total, $20,000; estimated loss, $40,000. The building is owned by EVAN JONES, of Plainfield, whose loss will be about $10,000. Insurance, if any, not known.

More Chinamen at Belleville.

The satisfaction felt with the performances of the Chinamen in Capt. HERVEY'S laundry at Belleville is so great that the force has been increased. "CHARLEY" MING, the book-keeper, went to San Francisco, and on Thursday returned to Belleville with fifty-two Celestials, making a total of 172 employed in the laundry. These men are not sought because of the cheapness of their labor, but because they can be depended on, and others cannot be secured. Capt. HERVEY has more work contracted for than he can finish in six months, and would gladly employ all the suitable hands he could secure. He has in his employ sixty or seventy girls, most of whom are Irish.

Award of Contracts for Public Work.

The following contracts for street-paving, constructing sewers, &c., were awarded by the Department of Public Works yesterday:

1—For paving Broome-street, between Broadway and Centre-street, with Belgian pavement, and laying crosswalks at the intersecting streets where required, to JAMES GEARTY, at $7,774 50.

2—For paving Bayard-street, between Bowery and Baxter-street, with Belgian pavement, and laying crosswalks at the intersecting streets where required, to JAS. EVERARD, at $6,825.

3—For paving Willett-street, from Grand to Rivington-street, with Belgian pavement, and laying crosswalks at the intersecting streets where required, to JAS. EVERARD, at $7,965.

4—For paving Thirty-second-street, from Second avenue to East River, with Belgian pavement, and laying crosswalks at the intersecting streets where required, to JAS. EVERARD, at $10,004.

5—For paving Forty-fifth-street, from Second-avenue to East River, with Belgian pavement, and laying crosswalks at the intersecting streets where required, to JAS. GEARTY, at $8,934.

6—For paving Fifty-first-street, from Broadway to Eighth-avenue, with Belgian pavement, and laying crosswalks at the intersecting streets where required, to JAS. EVERARD, at $5,165.

7—For paving Fifty-seventh-street, from Eighth to Ninth-avenue, with Belgian pavement, and laying crosswalks at the intersecting streets where required, to JAS. EVERARD, at $6,996.

8—For paving Astor-place, from Fourth-avenue to Broadway, with Belgian pavement, and laying crosswalks at the intersecting streets where required, to JAS. EVERARD, at $10,113.

9—For paving Eighth-street, from Fourth-avenue to Broadway, with Belgian pavement, and laying crosswalks at the intersecting streets where required, to JAS. GEARTY, at $2,495.

STORING COMBUSTIBLES.

The Traffic in Kerosene Oil—1,087 Applications for Licenses—Form of License.

The Commissioners of the Fire Department are stringently enforcing all the provisions of the recently-passed law that are applicable to the safe storing of combustible materials and compounds, and consequently, during the last three weeks, the Chief of the Bureau of Combustibles, Mr. GILDERSLEEVE, has received 1,087 applications from dealers in kerosene oil, who are required to take out a license in order to continue their business. Each license costs $10. The form of license is as follows;

No. —.
FIRE DEPARTMENT OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK.
(STATE ARMS.)
BUREAU OF COMBUSTIBLES.

Pursuant to chapter 742, section four, of the Laws of the State of New-York for the year 1871, —— is hereby licensed and authorized by the Board of Commissioners of the Fire Department of the City of New-York, with the consent of the Mayor of the said City to keep on sale at —— dealer, at ——, place of business at No. ——, in the City of New-York, Kerosene or other products of petroleum, or any similar oil to be used for heating or illuminating purposes, which shall not emit an inflammable vapor at a temperature below 110 degrees Fahrenheit, by the test of G. TAGLIABUE'S instruments. To be stored, kept, labeled, sold and delivered in the manner and quantity provided for in said act, and in accordance with such regulations as may be established by the Department from time to time in reference to the same.

This license is revocable at pleasure, is issued subject to the foregoing conditions, and with the express understanding that —— will use all possible care and diligence to avoid accidents, and to comply with the sections of said act, a copy of which is delivered and accepted herewith, that it is available only for the particular place of business named, is not transferable, and will expire on the —— day of ——, 187—.

In witness whereof, the Board of Commissioners of the Fire Department of the City of New-York, have caused this license to be issued, (SEAL.) signed by their President and attested by the Chief Clerk, this —— day of ——, 187—.

——, Chief Clerk. ——, President.

In addition there have been seventy-two applications to date to license to sell gunpowder and percussion caps. Others want licenses for the keeping of matches for sale, collodeon, guncotton, nitro-glycerine, dualin, nitrate of silver and nitrate of soda. Some have inquired of the department if wholesale dealers are required to take out a license, and their attention has been called to the following, which is an extract from the recently passed law: "Any person, firm or company dealing in, selling or giving away any combustible material, compound or product thereof, shall be required to take out a license on account of the business above specified, in which they are engaged."

Some of the dealers in liquid gas and other products of naphtha, have so far been defiant, and sought the aid of prominent politicians to induce the Commissioners not to enforce the law against them and close their establishments. It is semi-officially announced yesterday, that proceedings had been commenced, which would at once cause the proper enforcement of the law.

The whole number of licenses which were granted for the sale of fireworks to celebrate "our glorious Fourth," was 1,577.

Pigeon-Shooting on Staten Island.

A "pigeon shoot" of more than ordinary interest came off at the Richmond Club Grounds on Thursday afternoon, inaugurating that sport on Staten Island. The principal contestants were WM. M. PARKS and SAMUEL BURTON, (well known in the financial circles of this City,) ROBERT ROBINSON, of Brooklyn, the celebrated gunmaker, J. DOUGAL, of London, and Messrs. EDWARD and WILLIS BURTON, CLAWSON, UNDERHILL, METCALFE and LEGUIN, of Staten Island. The trap was pulled by the eminent JOHN WOOD, Esq., lighthouse keeper, twenty-one yards rise, eighty yards boundary. The first match was between Messrs. PARKS and ROBINSON, a match of five birds each contestant killing his birds cleverly. On the tie, Mr. ROBINSON proved victor. The most interesting feature of the afternoon, however, was a match of five birds between Messrs. PARKS and SAMUEL BURTON, each party killing four, missing one. On the tie it was agreed that the first miss should lose. Then came swarm and clever work, each man killing the bird he missed in five. It was a repetition of the old Wall-street game—brokers at one end of the gun, pigeons at the other. Manifestly the latter had no chance. It was observed that when, by accident, the innocent pigeon got away, back he came, of his own accord, within reach of the gun, and was of course dropped without further preliminary. After fifteen birds had been killed successively on each side, Mr. PARKS, who seemed somewhat nervous and fatigued, proposed a draw and divide, the proposition being accepted. The sports culminated with an excellent dinner, provided by that erectest and squarest (as well as most angular) of landlords, Hon. DAVID RYERS. Present on the ground we noticed Capt. Jacob Vanderbilt, Gen. Huddleson, Col. Dexter Allen, Hon. Geo. Ellis, Sergt. John Baxter, and several other prominent residents of Staten Island, as well as a number of ladies, who strayed around the fringe of the sporting audience. The affair was an eminently pleasant one, and promises to be the first of a successful series, unless the interference of Mr. BERGH should nip the sport untimely in the bud.

Singular Complication—Story of a Gambler.

A short time since Mr. T. ROSE, a well-known sporting character, entered a faro bank in the Bowery, kept by PATRICK BRANNIGAN, and won $90 in the play. On demanding the money he received a $50 bill and four bills of the denomination of $10 each. With his gains he speedily set out for Saratoga, where he "put up" at the first hotel in this celebrated watering-place. After a few days sojourn he determined to return to New-York, and presented this $50 bill in payment for board. On examining it the clerk returned it remarking that it was counterfeit, and having no more money at hand Mr. ROSE found himself in a rather awkward predicament. Hon. JOHN MORRISSEY, who was apprised of the event, relieved him of his embarrassment by liquidating his debt, and in no very amiable condition of mind, Mr. ROSE returned to the City, vowing vengeance again PAT BRANNIGAN, with whom he immediately sought an interview. On charging him with his offense, BRANNIGAN denied having ever had any transaction with the irate Mr. ROSE, particularly in regard to counterfeit $50 bills. ROSE made known the circumstances of the case to United States Commissioner SHIELDS, and a warrant was issued for the arrest of BRANNIGAN. The bill was produced, and sent to the experts, CLARKE BROS., Chambers-street, to pass upon its genuineness, when it was ascertained that it was perfectly good, and they were willing to change it for him. BRANNIGAN was, of course, discharged, and half an hour subsequently ROSE was relating the incident to a delighted crowd of Deputy Marshals and Sheriffs over some strong Bourbon at Delmonico's.

Highway Robbery in the Newark Meadows.

CASPER WERDER, living in New-York, and having a flour-store in the City, and one on Newark-avenue, Jersey City, yesterday made complaint before the authorities of Newark and Jersey City, stating that on Wednesday night, while on the meadows between the two cities, he was gagged and robbed of $725, and a gold watch worth $200. He had been engaged in making collections in Newark, and when returning by the turnpike, at 9 o'clock in the evening, he was set upon by five men. He was knocked insensible, and, after being gagged, was robbed, and left lying in the wagon. He was so badly injured that on arriving home he could give no account of himself, and the matter has been kept from the authorities two days. Only $200 was in checks, the balance, $525, being in ready money. The assault took place near the same spot at which MAHONEY was so mysteriously killed two months ago.

FRIDAY, July 14—P. M.

Wall-street was duller than usual today, even for Midsummer. The absenteeism of the Brokers is quite as marked as among their customers. The attendance at the Stock Exchange is falling off, in consequence of the want of orders and the want of confidence, at the same time, in speculating in the Railway Stocks and Miscellaneous Shares, for the Fall campaign. The amount of business at the Exchange Board in these Stocks is very light, on what might be called strong bidding prices for three or four of the prominent Western Roads. The Stock and Scrip of the New-York Central are barely steady. The Reading Stock is firm, on a small offering.

In the Public Funds there was a fair business done at steady figures. The 5-20s of 1867 left off 112½@112¾ ℔ cent., while the price of Gold was 112¾@112¾ ℔ cent. The latter was a fraction stronger than at the close of the Gold Room last night. The supply of Exchange was less free and the rates 4½@4¾ cent. higher than early in the week. London, 60 days, 110¼@110⅜ ℔ cent. There is little or no export demand for Gold, however, for the steamer of Saturday.

The Southern State Bonds and the Railway Mortgages are generally dull. The abundance of Money at cheap rates on call loan seems to have little or no influence upon the actual investment of the public in Railway Mortgages, of recent creation, which promise from 6@7 ℔ cent. in Gold to 7@8 ℔ cent. in Currency per annum. There is a certain amount of trouble, however, in these securities going on all the time for European account, which, added to the constant Foreign demand for our Public Funds, has a favorable influence on Exchange.

After the late Boards the following quotations were made as compared with Thursday night. The general market leaves off dull:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

There is a report that some powder magazines on the East of Paris, exploded yesterday, and caused considerable destruction of life and property. It is believed to have been caused by disaffected Communists, and a good deal of excitement was occasioned by it. It is reported that riotous demonstrations against the French authorities have taken place at Nice. The French Governmeht is attempting to recover railroad cars captured by the Germans during the late war. Arrests of Communists are still made and it is announced that they will all be tried together. In the English House of Lords yesterday, the Earl of Derby condemned the system of purchasing commissions in the army. The London Times yesterday used the New-York riot as a text for some remarks on the management of the Irish in Ireland.

GENERAL.

The Connecticut House of Representatives yesterday adopted the resolutions appropriating money and appointing a Committee of Construction for the proposed new State loan at Hertford.

The races at Saratoga yesterday were very exciting. The great event of the day was the second race, for the "Saratoga Cup," which was won by Longfellow, who beat Kingfisher, the second horse, by four lengths. The first race was a three-fourths of a mile dash for two-year olds, and was won by St. Patrick. The third race was for three-year olds, one and-a-half miles, and was won by AUGUST BELMONT'S chestnut colt By the Sea.

The President of the Lake Superior and Mississippi Railroad states that the recent and unusual agitation of the water at the head of Lake Superior, which was described in a Chicago dispatch as a destructive tidal-wave, did no damage whatever at Duluth or elsewhere.

Gen. CASEY, Collector of the Port of New-Orleans, and family, are the guests of President GRANT at Long Branch. Secretary ROBESON arrived there last evening from Washington, and is also the guest of the President, who leaves here on Monday morning for Fort Hamilton.

The Methodist Episcopal State Convention of Iowa passed resolutions, Thursday last, recommending to the General Conference the maintenance of three great metropolitan organs, and to remand other denominational papers to local support; also, to aid the German work by electing Bishops who speak German.

A terrible hurricane visited St. Joseph, Mo., and vicinity on Thursday night. Houses were unroofed and blown down in every part of the city. Four or five persons were killed by the lightning and falling timbers, and many persons were injured. The loss on property cannot fall below $200,000.

Arrangements have been consummated by the Lake Superior and Mississippi Railroad Company to build a railroad bridge at Stillwater, Minn., to connect with the West Wisconsin Railroad, an injunction having been granted against the bridging of the St. Croix River at Hudson, Minn.

The Virginia Educational Convention, which has been holding its sessions at Winchester, yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution of respect to the memory of Gen. LEE, late President of Washington College, and adjourned to meet again on the second Tuesday in July, 1872, in Staunton.

A party of journalists, numbering about twenty-five, left Erie, Penn., yesterday morning, on an excursion up the lakes to Duluth, and over the completed portion of the Northern Pacific Railroad to the Red River, and down the Red River by steamer to Fort Garry and Lake Winnipeg, in British America, returning via St. Paul and the all rail routes.

A gang of thieves, at the head of which was EMMA DANFIELD, styled their "Queen," occupying a hut built by them under Scott's Dam, at the junction of the Reading and Norristown Railroad, in Pennsylvania, have been arrested by the Police. The gang is composed of four men and two women. They were committed for trial on numerous charges of robbing the neighboring farmers.

Gov. Hoffman and Mayor Hall.

The Democratic and Ring journals are quarreling over the question who is most to blame for the disturbances of Wednesday—the Mayor or the Governor? The public have formed an opinion on that point which cannot very easily be changed. The Mayor provoked the riot by encouraging an unruly mob to believe that they could control this City. Gov. HOFFMAN was the only man among the Tammany crowd who showed a spark of proper spirit, and his revocation of the infamous General Order No. 57, issued by HALL, met with the full approval of the public. It was the only act performed by the authorities down to that moment which was not discreditable to the City. The Mayor had basely allowed one class of foreigners, and that by no means the best class, to make an attack on public liberties, and play the part of dictators in the community. The Governor reversed this proceeding, and for doing so he appears to have drawn upon his head the anger of the ultra-Irish party and of the Tammany gang. The Mayor has let loose upon him his horde of cowardly libellers—for it is worthy of a man who was scared out of his wits at the bare prospect of an angry crowd, to keep in his employment a band of "literary" cut-throats, not superior to him in intellect and a little lower than him in character. Gov. HOFFMAN very seldom receives a good word from us, but he deserves it on this occasion. The whole Tammany crew are yelping at his heels, because he ventured to vindicate public law and public liberties. The general public think more highly of him than they have done since the day when he unluckily signed the Erie bill. He can afford to despise Mayor HALL'S hired bravos.

But what can any intelligent man think of Mayor HALL'S position? The Mayor says, "there would have been no riot if Order No. 57 had been allowed to stand." That is to say, while the turbulent classes are allowed to have everything their own way, they will condescend to be quiet. Is not HALL condemning himself afresh by this argument? He has the hardihood to hold forth, every day, to the newspaper reporters with the air of a man who has done great things for his country. He regards his unpopularity with the calm complacency of a man who knows that he long ago forfeited all claim to the respect of his fellow citizens, and who is no longer capable of feeling a twinge of shame. He has the insolence to speak of the merchants who signed the resolutions against him, at the Produce Exchange, as a "set of gamblers and butter dealers." What right has the Mayor of a City thus to insult any class of its citizens? OAKEY HALL relies much upon the entrenchments which the Ring have thrown up round him, but the storm of public opinion which his order evoked, on Tuesday, ought to have taught him that there is a far greater power in existence than that of the Ring, and that this power, if fully aroused, is capable of sweeping him away, and all his fellow-rascals, in a very short space of time. Gamblers and butter dealers! Who is the Mayor that he should stigmatize offensively a large and honorable body of merchants? He cannot say that they are swindlers and thieves—but they can bring that charge against OAKEY HALL and his Ring confederates. There is scarcely any discreditable act of which HALL does not seem determined to be guilty. He, it appears, was the author of the infamous "Code Amendments," designed to gag that portion of the Press which declines to take his dirty money. And now he brings about a riot by pandering to an arrogant and unruly mob, and then insults respectable citizens who venture to object to his course. He tells the City, "Let my friends, the ruffians, do as they like, and you will never have a disturbance." Perhaps not; but we do not want peace on those terms.

He asserts that before long the public will fully "indorse" his course. He does not yet seem to be aware that the public look upon him as a poltroon, and believe that the City is disgraced by the position he occupies in it. His long-winded addresses to the reporters, his floundering among the big words which he picks up in the World office, his impudent attempts to laugh down the indignation he has excited, will not change the public mind concerning him. Nor can he succeed in transferring the odium which properly belongs to him to Gov. HOFFMAN. The Governor acted like a man, and OAKEY HALL like a blubbering baby. But HALL boasts that he does not care for the opinion out of doors, because the ultra-Irish are with him, and the "Americans" never vote the Tammany ticket any way, so that it makes no difference what the latter say or feel. He cares only for the goodwill of the Irish, and that his cowardly order secured. He is now trying to do all he can to inflame the minds of the Irish against Gov. HOFFMAN. This is one more act of treachery in a life marked by treachery—treachery to his political friends, and to all who have had any relations with him. Whatever the lower class of Irish may think about OAKEY HALL, he is irreparably ruined in the estimation of all honest and respectable men, and if he had any rag of honor still clinging to him, he would go and hide his head among his brother thieves, and the jail-birds who are his favorite "literary" companions.

The Presidency in the Light of Last Week's Events.

The events of the past week in this City will have great weight in the Presidential election of next year. They have brought to the plain light of day facts which before rested to some extent on inference and suspicion. They have shown in a manner which a wayfaring man, though a fool, cannot misinterpret, that the Democratic Party is hopelessly in league with the only dangerous classes in our country. It has been proven, too, how utterly incompetent to deal with these classes that party is—that it lacks foresight, discretion, courage, skill, or principle. We have already seen modern Democracy made the shield for violence, intimidation, and assassination for political purposes in the South. The apologists and defenders of the secret bands of Kuklux outlaws are to be found only among Democratic journalists and Democratic politicians. Horrified and disgusted as the country has been at the course of the entire Northern Democracy toward the disgraceful and threatening disorders of the South, its horror and disgust have been deepened a thousand times by the attitude of the Tammany leaders toward the ruffians who openly declared their intention of violating the peace of this City, and the rights of its citizens.

There are but two elements in our population that offer serious difficulty to free and orderly government. One is made up of the ignorant and lawless men who have for two years maintained a reign of terror in the thinly-settled districts of the Southern States. These have kept alive the smouldering fires of hatred kindled by the civil war. They have robbed, burned, beaten, and killed on every hand. Neither the property nor the lives of Unionists or negroes have been safe from their cowardly and treacherous attacks. Their purpose has been as unconcealed as their procedure has been lawless. They have sought to extirpate the Republican Party by driving away or murdering its leaders, and by frightening colored voters from the polls. For this intent, and for the dastardly means they have employed, they have yet failed in a single instance to receive an adequate condemnation from the Democrats, North or South. The energies of that party have been steadily directed to screening them from public indignation, and denouncing the measures of the National Government to repress or punish them. It was hardly possible to conceive of a more shameless demoralization than that which has characterized all the acts and expressions of the Democracy toward the dangerous class of the South.

But it has been reserved for the Democrats to show that a still more shameless demoralization is possible, and that their party is capable of it. This has been done in the treatment of the second of the two elements of American population which threaten the free and orderly administration of republican government. That element is made up of the ignorant and lawless masses of our great cities. These are obviously more dangerous than even the Southern Kuklux. They are more numerous. They are actuated by religious as well as political hatreds. They are crowded together in the midst of immense bodies of decent citizens, to whose safety in person and property their presence forms a standing threat. They include the most inveterate criminals, roughs, thieves, gamblers. In many cities, notably in New-York, they are organized and led by low politicians, who by fraud and violence have advanced their party leaders not only to official stations, but to great wealth. They are today the constituency of Tammany. The last five days have not only demonstrated this fact, but have shown that Tammany recognized its masters, and was afraid of them.

Now, the people are bent upon one thing, in this country, if upon no other, and that is that freedom under the law shall be maintained. When, therefore, they are asked to trust the Democratic Party with the administration of the Government, they will say, "No." We must have a man for President who is neither himself a coward, nor representative of a party that can be cowed. In the one trying emergency of the country's history, Gen. GRANT showed that he was at once fearless, wise, and capable. When that emergency had partly passed by, he was called to the Presidency by a party that only demanded of him continued courage and fidelity. As between that party, with Gen. GRANT at its head, and the Democratic Party, with any man it can nominate, the people will not be long in choosing. They will never consent that the National Government shall be entangled on the one hand with sympathy for the disorders of the South, or on the other with Tammany, the representative of the more hateful disorders of the North.

A Trio of Poisoners.

Poisoning seems to be coming into fashion. The easy method of divorce, supposed to have been followed by that Connecticut lady who is now on trial for the innovation, has been adopted with great success by a pretty young woman in Kentucky. Having made up her mind to marry her employer, a wealthy old gentleman, incumbered, however, with a wife, she smoothed the way by poisoning the irksome spouse. Then she married her wealthy old gentleman, and they lived very happily, we may suppose, until one day he made a will leaving all his property to his pretty young wife. Then he, too, died, just in time to enable his disconsolate widow to gratify a new passion by marrying another man. He had not yet made his will in her favor, or had nothing to leave, or she had not yet had time to select a third husband, when the friends of her first husband cruelly cut short her little game by causing her arrest.

But the case reported from Baltimore quite throws this little romance into the shade. There it is no vulgar villany of an ambitious and over-scrupulous servant-maid; but, if accounts are to be believed, the startling depravity of a leader of society. We are requested to believe that a lady moving in the "best circles," educated, accomplished and refined, has been amusing herself during a series of years by disposing of a number of her male kinsmen and friends through the prosaic medium of tartar emetic. Her husband and son, two cousins, and her financial agent, are mentioned as among her alleged victims. This, it will be seen, is a sufficiently liberal estimate of the poisoner's capacity for murder, and if everything charged against her is proved, the Baltimore Brinvilliers will quite eclipse the Connecticut Borgia. Public opinion in Baltimore is said to incline to the hypothesis of this eminent person's guilt. But, then, as public opinion generally has that tendency, whenever it is promised so delightful a sensation as a refined and lovely poisoner, it is not, perhaps, entirely safe to rely on it. At any rate, it will be best to wait for the result of the judicial investigation now pending before absolutely announcing the discovery of a new monster of wickedness.

But this succession of poisoners is a little ominous. Are we, then, to have a renewal of those practices which in the Middle Ages made life so agreeably exciting to gentlemen with fortunes and impecunious female relatives? Is the beautiful fiend, so long familiar to us in the romances of Miss BRADDON and Mr. WILKIE COLLINS, to step out from those inspired pages, and repeat her achievements on the theatre of real life? If half that is told of Mrs. SHERMAN and Mrs. WHARTON be true, Miss Grilt or Lady Audley was hardly "a circumstance" to them. If things go on in this way, those of us who are blest with an enviable superabundance of worldly goods will have to dispense with female relatives altogether, or else restablish the old mediæval office of taster. Death which comes in the insidious guise of coffee and arsenic, or milk punches flavored with tartar emetic, is not very pleasant to contemplate.

Useless Allies.

The events of the present week have exhibited two men in this City in their true colors, and reduced them to their proper standing in the community. These men are MANTON MARBLE, editor of the World, and A. OAKEY HALL, Mayor of New-York. Both of them were formerly Republicans by profession, but the Republican Party—to its credit and sagacity be it said—never had any confidence in either of them, and steadily refused to give them any promotion or consideration in its ranks. When MANTON MARBLE was besieging the Union League Club, and imploring leading Republicans about town to buy up the stock of the World, and thus prevent the terrible calamity of its being turned into a Democratic paper, he met with no success, for the simple reason that every Republican who knew the man, infinitely preferred that any paper which was going to be conducted by him should be on the Democratic rather than on the Republican side. And so with Mayor HALL; the Republicans refused to gratify his itching ambition for place, knowing full well that he would only bring discredit on the party that indorsed him. The result was that both of these demagogues were forced to transfer their services to the Democracy, by whom they were received with open arms, as possessing that peculiar talent and lack of principle which could be made available in the swindling practices of the Tammany gang. TWEED, SWEENY and CONNOLLY, neither of whom is able to "make a speech," found in Mayor HALL'S "gift of gab" a kind of assistance that SWEENY declared was "very useful to us;" while MANTON MARBLE'S facility for writing on any or all sides of a question at once, in long sentences filled with big words, delighted, while it astonished, the unlettered trio who are scarcely able to spell out their names correctly. But there is such a thing as being too glib, both with the tongue and pen; and the over-serviceable zeal of the Bohemian orator and scribe were bound in the end to bring their employers into difficulty. It is now reported that the "Ring" are anxious to get rid of their "useful man," OAKEY, and that they go into spasms at the bare mention of MARBLE or the World.

The Gallant James Fisk, Jr.

Piety and valor are both enviable qualities, but in these degenerate days they do not often go together. That peculiarity which distinguished the army in Flanders is still noticeable in many captains of mettle, and the soldier is now, as in other days, full of strange oaths, and more given to his cups than his devotions. CLAVERHOUSE is still a more typical soldier than CROMWELL. But, every now and then, as if to show what she can do, nature gives us one of those rarely perfect spirits, wherein is combined a fervent piety with a fiery courage. Such a soldier is Col. FISK. The Colonel's deep religious feeling was already known. He had proved it by persisting, in defiance of opposition, in saying his prayers before all the world on Boston Common. We took occasion then to commend his unexpected virtue, and we are happy to have occasion now to praise his not less unlooked-for bravery.

We know that the Colonel was not without hardihood. His entire career showed him to have abundance of that useful quality. But the intrepidity required to appropriate alien property, and the resolution necessary to seek the bubble reputation at the cannon's mouth, are very different things: And the Colonel has so much to live for—his opera-house, his steam-boats, his railroad, and his diamonds,—his life is so very precious to himself and to large numbers of Erie stockholders—that we did him the injustice of supposing he would not risk the chances of the fray. But we were wrong, as the events of Wednesday proved. The Colonel's valor is equal to his piety, which is saying a great deal. His own account of his exploits on that memorable day presents a thrilling picture of military skill and gallantry. When the fight commenced, the Colonel was absent from his beloved battalions, like SHERIDAN at Winchester. But he snuffed the battle afar off, and heeding only the instincts of his reckless courage, rushed at once to the field. He did not even wait to wax his mustache, or to don his diamonds, or to secure an injunction. And so, without his most effective weapons, but trusting only to his unfamiliar sword, he flung himself boldly into the mêlée. What deeds of heroic daring he would have achieved can only be conjectured, for cruel fate in the guise of a rioter smote him treacherously on the ankle, and toppled him in the gutter. Like ACHILLES in valor, he fitly shared ACHILLES' fate.

A warrior, however skillful, and brave, and pious, is of but little use with only one ankle. And so the good Colonel, defeated but not dismayed, retreated in good order to the nearest house. And here his adventures, as related by himself, assume something of the picturesque and touching interest of CHARLES' flight from the fatal field of Worcester, or FISK'S own escape to New-Jersey on a previous memorable occasion. The pious Colonel felt that he was too rich a prize to be lightly lost. In imagination he saw ten thousand infuriated Hibernians thirsting for his blood. His sole chance for life was to leave the country at once. So, hastily disguising himself and blacking his mustache, he slipped through a back door, and fortunately finding a coach, procured the driver thereof, by unlimited largess of Erie shares, to convey him to the Hoffman House, as if all the Deputy Marshals in the City were headlong on his track. But not here could he find rest, for he knew that the rioters would not scruple to burn that hostelry if they learned it sheltered their most dreaded enemy. Once more the wounded hero fled, and only stopped on the deck of his own trusty steamer, which speedily wafted him beyond reach of his pursuers.

This notable exploit alone was needed to add the crowning glory to the conqueror of Boston and the confiscator of a railroad. Henceforth he has earned a triple title to the gratitude of his fellow-citizens. Perhaps of him it may one day be said that he was first in war, first in peace and first in the pockets of his countrymen. We tender him our respectful sympathy in his wounded condition, and we consign to unlimited scorn the base insinuation that he was afraid. He has shown that he can fight and pray, and, when needful, run away in a manner surpassed by few soldiers of any age. So let him be duly honored.

Are the Ringleaders to be Punished?

There can be no doubt that the men who were chiefly concerned in provoking the riot on Wednesday are well known to the authorities. The Mayor himself is the bosom friend of some of them—a very serious charge, but one which the Brooklyn Eagle has deliberately brought against him, and which can easily be substantiated. The Mayor is the means of keeping an incendiary journal in existence which only the lower class of Irish ever see, and which did its little worst to incite that class to commit a riot. The Mayor is, in fact, the head of a set of ruffians who are constantly engaged in the work of pandering to the passions of the most ignorant portion of our Irish population. For this he cannot be brought to punishment, but since he pretends to be so anxious to preserve public order, we do not see how he can avoid taking notice of the recent proceedings of the Hibernian Societies.

We publish elsewhere a remarkable statement which appeared yesterday in the Sun on this subject. It appears that a man named EDWARD L. CAREY, a "Port Warden," with a salary of seven thousand dollars a year, was one of the most active of all the ringleaders of the riot. According to this account, he tried to induce the Father Mathew Societies to take part in the disturbances; and our own reporters inform us that at one of the meetings of the Hibernian Convention he uttered threats of assassination against various persons in the City.

As the Sun truly says, "many misguided men were arrested on Wednesday," but they were the dupes of fellows like CAREY. Is the leader to escape while his victims are punished? Is this man to continue to draw seven thousand dollars a year for getting up riots in our streets, and trying to induce his followers to become assassins? CAREY'S responsibility for the disturbances on Wednesday is great enough and clear enough to justify the authorities in prosecuting him. The public will certainly demand that he and his fellow-ringleaders shall be brought to justice, and unless the Tammany gang want to provoke a fresh storm of indignation, they will anticipate this demand, and not try to shield the persons who openly endeavored to make our streets the scene of riot and murder.

MINOR TOPICS.

Harper's Weekly contains, in the last number, a striking collection of caricatures by NAST, illustrating TWEED'S "short talk" at the Tammany powwow on the Fourth. Mr. NAST is one of the boldest and most effective foes of the Ring. His assaults are appreciated by everybody, learned or unlearned, and they hurt the rascals they are aimed at more than mere words can. Nor is this artist dependent on coarse and obvious caricature for his tremendous influence. While his points are plain to the most casual observer, their subtle meaning will repay careful study. In the ingenuity with which he stamps the faces of our four dictators with varied expressions of effrontery, cunning, complacency and greed, he is absolutely unrivaled. It may interest his thousands of admirers to know that on Wednesday Mr. NAST shouldered his musket and marched with the Seventh Regiment in defense of the cause he has so bravely upheld with his pencil, against the ruffians he has made so familiar to the readers of Harper's.

Will Superintendent KELSO deign to inform the public from what source he obtained the "legal advice" under which he says he issued "Order No. 57" to prevent the Orange parade? Was it from Mayor HALL or CHARLES O'CONOR? The latter gentleman is reported to have been closeted with the Mayor for several hours previous to the issue of the order. Since Mr. O'CONOR retired from the active practice of the law, he appears to have devoted his leisure hours to the service of our municipal "Ring" as their standing counselor. When they wanted a legal opinion to sustain them in taking the election of Controller out of the hands of the people, by a clause fraudulently inserted in a TAX LEVY, they applied to Mr. O'CONOR and got it. It was a very lengthy opinion, and probably cost the City a good many thousand dollars, but the "Ring" did not dare rely on it, for they ran "Slippery" DICK for Controller at the next election in spite of Mr. O'CONOR'S opinion that it was illegal so to do. And now they are again compelled to back down from his "legal advice." One would think that it was about time they changed their lawyer, or that their lawyer changed his clients.

The last weekly returns of the Board of Health show an increase of 69 in the number of deaths over the corresponding week of last year, and of 106 over the previous week. This latter advance is one of seventeen per cent., and is caused almost entirely by diseases traceable to the effect of heat in our filthy streets. Two hundred and fifty-four of 710 deaths were of children under two years of age and from diarrhœa. Any one passing along either side of our City, through the tenement-house region, and observing the masses of rotting garbage, dirty water, and decaying animal matter lying in the streets, will only wonder that we do not pay more dearly than at present for the criminal neglect of our City authorities. For the sake of preserving the lives of their most degraded tools, who swarm from these neighborhoods, the Tammany officials might address themselves to the task of cleaning the streets.

Our Saratoga correspondent tells of a very successful little speculation on one of the Albany steam-boats, a few evenings since. It appears that some of the keen ones, bound for the races, saw in the crush of passengers an opportunity to increase their capital, and purchased a good supply of tickets for the best state-rooms on board. When the clerk announced that all the rooms had been disposed of, the "speculators" began their work, and very soon succeeded in selling their tickets at a clear profit of three dollars on each. The habit of at once handing the key of a state-room to the purchaser of a ticket, may be very proper, so far as the clerk's convenience is concerned, but as a means of restricting the operations of "speculators," it is of no value whatever, and should be discontinued. It is to the interest of all public carriers not only to provide liberally for the comfort and safety of their passengers, but also to see that they do not suffer by the sharp practices of petty swindlers.

An evening paper conveys the information that, during a discussion of the riot by some officers of the Irish Brigade Association, the "action of the authorities was unanimously condemned." It adds that the Association will meet on Sunday, at Sweeny's Hotel, to make preparations for a meeting of Irish citizens to express their views on this subject. If the meeting is held, we have no doubt it will be highly offensive to that small but influential body of men known as the Tammany Ring. While we have no reason to suppose that any provocation could force those gentlemen's courage to the fighting point, we are curious to know whether the meeting will be forbidden, or, if it be allowed, whether it will be broken up by the Tammany roughs, or dispersed by the Police. In any case, Tammany bids fair to hear a good deal of ugly truth-telling from all sides.

Yesterday was the day on which WILLIAM FOSTER, the murderer of Mr. AVERY D. PUTNAM, would have been hanged, had not Judge PRATT, of Brooklyn, granted a stay of proceedings. What has become of the promise of speedy justice in this case, in which an example should have been made that would not have been soon forgotten? As soon as the public had in some degree lost sight of the atrocity of the crime, and after the Judge before whom he was tried had refused to reconsider the matter, a Judge was found in another county willing to take the desired action. The result is that the murderer has a respite till November, when the General Term meets. FOSTER'S counsel hopes by this delay to save his client's neck altogether. If a new trial is not granted, it is to be hoped that the Governor's clemency, which has already been invoked, will not be extended to FOSTER. His guilt is just as unmitigated today as it was on the day when the announcement of it first shocked the public.

A correspondent wishes to know whether the initials "A. O. H." stand for A. OAKEY HALL or "Ancient Order of Hibernians." We shall have to refer our querist to the Mayor for information; he has the patent right of those initials, and is able to make them stand for almost anything, as occasion requires. When he was a "Know-Nothing" he was in the habit, by a slight transposition, of making them signify, "Orangemen All Hail!" but now he desires them to be read, "All Orangemen to H——." The public has arrived at the conclusion that the owner of the initials is "An Odious Humbug."

If it be true that success almost surely awaits the act now before the Connecticut election, to abolish the Usury laws in that State, the Connecticut statutes will be by so much more nearly in harmony with the age than those of New-York. A law which is not and cannot be enforced, which is only obeyed by those who do not care to elude it, and which is getting to be so thoroughly a dead-letter that even elusion is not now generally practiced, but open violation, is not only of no use on the statute-book, but of serious harm. In connection with the revision of our confused and conflicting tax legislation, the repeal of the Usury law would do much to release capital from absurd restrictions which neighboring States are gradually removing.

The College Regatta at Ingleside Next Week.

Noting the arrival of some of the members of the University Crew in Providence, the Journal of that city speaks in the following terms of the races between College crews to take place at Ingleside next week:

"The senior crew of Brown University, as also the Freshmen, are in good spirits and the best of health, and have been devoting themselves assiduously to practice for the glory of the 21st. They are quartered at the Ingleside Hotel, and the crews from the other Colleges are staying at a farm-house some little distance 'up the road.' For the University races next week, (Friday,) there have entered crews only from Brown, Harvard and Amherst Agricultural College. In the Freshman race only Brown and Harvard will contend. All the crews have skeleton boat-houses erected for their temporary accommodation; all are spoken of as first-class crews.

The regatta next week will really last three days. On Tuesday comes the Harvard-Atalanta race, which will undoubtedly be one of the finest during the week. On Thursday, the so-called Springfield Citizens' race will be the attraction. In these will be trials of skill between wherries, four-oared and six-oared boats. For the wherry race there have entered JOHN BIGLIN, of New-York; one or two of the WARD brothers; BUTLER, of Boston; O'LEARY, of Worcester, and HARRINGTON, of Springfield. The BIGLINS are also among the entries for the four-oared race, and there is every prospect of an exciting and interesting time. The Springfield Club offers the prizes, which are $100, $50 and $25 for the wherries; they amount to $250 for the six-oared and $200 for the four-oared boats. For the University crew that wins is offered the prize of six silver goblets worth $300, and to the Freshmen goblets one-fourth of that sum in value. The colors and the glory are also thrown in. Take it all in all, the regatta week promises full as much pleasure as was obtained at Worcester last year, though the course is by no means as good. When first selected, the water was some four or five feet higher than at present, and the other infelicities and irregularities of the river were not known. For about two-thirds of the distance to be rowed the track is a straight one, but the last mile bends from the first direction some thirty degrees, as has been ascertained by actual measurement. Good judges say there is much greater danger of a foul than at Quinsigamond, though there is no turning stake. The hotel at Ingleside is on a hill, about midway between the termini, about 250 feet back from the river. It is already crowded with visitors, and Chicopee, Holyoke and Springfield will doubtless receive each its complement next week.

NOTES OF TRAVEL.

CHICAGO, Wednesday, July 12, 1871.

Weeks go by in fast and friendly Chicago like days, and days like hours, and life is almost too rapid to be chronicled. The "glorious Fourth" has already faded into the dim distance. I remember, however, that it was a perfect day, even in a pic-nician sense. We spent it out of town, some eight miles to the westward, on the prairie, at a gentleman's pretty country seat—feasting and disporting under noble ancestral trees, some of them as much as four years old. It was fine exercise dodging about under them to catch the flickering shade. But we were quite as jolly as we could have been under the olives of Albano, the cedars of Warwick or the big pines of California. I have been in banishment from Chicago some four years, and in that time its growth and improvement have been absolutely marvelous. It grows on Independence days and Sabbath days and all days. It grows o' nights. Its enterprise, daring and vigilance storms the land and fetter the sea, defies and overrides physical laws and circumvents nature. A great part of the west side of the city seems to me to have been heaved up out of the mud by a benevolent earthquake. I see beautiful and stately marble buildings where four years ago were the humble little domiciles of the Germans, or the comfortless shanties of the Irish emegrants. What were then wastes of sand, and rubbish, and weeds, are now lovely public squares or parks, with hard, smooth drives, ponds, rocks, hillocks, rustic bridges and seats, and pretty vine-shaded arbors, and the usual park accompaniments of tame bears and caged eagles. All this rapid change and progress is as mysterious as it is marvelous, till you know a regular, genuine Chicagoan, and see him "go about his business," with a drive, a devotion, a matchless economy of time and means, which stop just short of hurry and greed—of the desperate and the sordid. The very struggle which the men of Chicago have always waged against adverse national conditions, has been to a degree ennobling, and has lifted their lives above the common-place. It is essentially heroic; it is something titanic; it is more creation than development. Foot by foot, inch by inch, they have gained on swampy flats, on oozing clay-banks, on treacherous sand heaps. Every year has chronicled new enteprises, new triumphs. The sluggish, miasmatic waters, once all abroad, have been driven back, and headed off, and hemmed in, and, at last, brought to bay, in the horrible little river that now creeps in a Stygian flood through the city it does its best to poison and pollute, while sullenly bearing back and forth rich burdens of commerce. But the hour has almost come when that ill-famed stream must take the back track—double on itself—actually run up its channel, and through the Illinois Canal into the Illinois River, and so down into the Mississippi. Then Lake Michigan, who does a great deal of mischief for lack of better employment, will have a heavier job to perform in the cleansing line than the Rivers Peneus and Acpheus together accomplished for Augeas and Hercules; the canal-digger of Ella will be outdone by one MURPHY.

I remember giving in the TIMES the reply of a Washington candidate for the Civil Service to the question, "Into what do the Northern lakes empty?" It was "Into the Gulf of Mexico." We smiled at that answer; but the time draws nigh when it shall be vindicated and verified. The young man was a prophet. He spoke for posterity and Chicago. We are all waiting the great experiment with anxiety, as once we hung with wild expectations on the ditching at Yorktown and the opening of the canals of Vicksburg and Dutch Gap. If it succeeds, it will doubtless be a grand thing for Chicago; but what will it do for the unfortunate people who live along the line of the canal? It is said that a ship canal through the Isthmus of Darien, may turn the course of the Gulf Stream, and make of England a boreal waste. Is is not possible that this new enterprise of engineering will desolate a smiling country by sending off traveling, the fearful smells of this monster sewer, to sicken the sweetest day and hold nigh carnival at night? Of course it depends on the present character of the Illinois Canal, for cleanliness and wholesomeness, whether the Union be a suitable one. If it were our Washington Canal, I certainly should not forbid the banns. In crossing the river at any point, and looking down at the black waters, so "thick and slab," one could easily imagine them dying the Illinois, and darkening the tawny Mississippi itself—one could believe they might "the multitudinous seas ink-arnadine."

But for a pleasanter theme. Lincoln Park, on the north side, is perhaps the most striking and apparently magical of all the enterprises and improvements of the city. It is already very beautiful, with a variety of surface and ornamentation most wonderful, when we remember that scarcely five years ago the spot was a dreary waste of drifting sand and unsightly weeds. The manner in which these elusive sands—full of the restlessness of the waves from which they have been rescued, are fixed and fettered, is very curious. Boards, stones, sticks, leaves, weeds, are laid on them, then clay is added, and so soil enough created to be sown or planted. The modest elevations called "hills," by courtesy, are also, I am told, "fearfully and wonderfully made" out of the most unsightly refuse and rubbish; so that, if future æsons, taking them for Indian-mounds, shall ever excavate one, they may perhaps come upon distinct strata of oyster-shells, tin fruit-cans, old shoes and broken crockery, with a substratum of hoop-skirts. No means, however humble, for breaking and elevating the surface are despised. I should not be surprised to hear that moles were protected by game-laws. To obtain water for ponds and fountains they have made a requisition on the secret reservoirs of Nature—on hidden streams that from unknown sources, perhaps as far away as the Rocky Mountains, have been for ages groping their way

"Through caverns measureless to man,
Down to a sunless sea."

They come forth into the light and the sweet, vital upper air, leaping and shouting, and make haste to join in the great, busy, restless life around them. Those artesian wells, with the lake-tunnels, will yet make Chicago more than the rival of Rome, in fountains and baths, and in that cleanliness which is next to godliness. The great drive on the lake shore, from Chicago to Evanston, will be another wonder, only surpassed by the system of continuous boulevards and parks, a complete circumvallation of the city, which at no distant day will furnish one of the grandest drives in the world. Citizens of Atlantic cities say they miss their grand rocks and hills, and the sea, "that symbol of the infinite." But Lake Michigan is a respectable bit of water, and the prairie has a beauty and even a grandeur of its own. If a cornfield of several thousand acres is not "a symbol of the infinite," I should like to know what is. The present entrance to Lincoln Park is a little depressing, being through a cemetery, but these old settlers are fast being unsettled, and re-established elsewhere. Even the dead must "move on" in Chicago. It were impossible for one to tell where in this vicinity he could take his last sleep. Chicago houses are all liable to be moved—even the "house of worship," and "the house appointed for all living." A moving building has ceased to be a moving sight here. Not only do small frame cottages, that a year or two ago were in quiet rural localities, take fright at the snort and the rush of advancing trade, and prance off to "fresh fields and pastures new," but substantial brick edifices sometimes migrate. A few years ago the Second Baptist Church, on Wabash-avenue action for the familiar eminence which overlooks it, and exclaimed:

"What's the matter with the Hill of Howth?"

The parks of the west side, patriotically and democratically named "Union" and "Jefferson," though reminding one somewhat, by their modest dimensions, and ingenious contrivances, and artifices of rock, and water, and hillock, and bridge, (with a "real flag-staff" and "real flag,") of the pious devices of JOHN WEMMICK, for the amusement of "the aged," are yet sources of incalculable enjoyment and good for all who live in their pleasant vicinity. Wooden pavements, splendid macadamized roads, and the new boulevards are fast bringing the beautiful suburban settlements of Lake-view, Kenwood, and Hyde Park into the municipal fold. The city is bearing down upon them at a tremendous rate, and the roar of traffic will soon drown for them, through the day, the deep, sweet monotone of the Lake. In the heart of the town Chicago is making worthy preparations to entertain the great floating population of the world setting Westward. The work on the new Pacific Hotel goes bravely on. I do not quite like the location, and the court-yard seems to me too small for so immense a caravansera. I am sorry to hear that it is proposed to change its name in order to do honor to one of its most munificent proprietors. No man's name seems to me big enough for such a hotel—not Montmorency, nor Metamora, nor Hohenzollern, nor Hole-in-the-day, nor Frelinghuysen, nor Lappincott. The old Court-house has taken to itself wings to meet the great rush of business in the murder and divorce line, and I hear much of POTTER PALMER'S new hotel, which is to out-Palmer PALMER. It is to be a monster affair, capable of accommodating an old-fashioned German principality, to say the least.

In short, all is astir here. There is no such thing as stagnation, or rest. Lake-winds and prairie-winds keep the very air in commotion. You catch the contagion of activity and enterprise, and have wild dreams of beginning life again, and settling—no, circulating, whirling in Chicago—the rapids and wild eddies of business have such a powerful fascination for one. Chicago postmen sometimes go their rounds on velocipedes. Chicago newsboys are preternaturally clever and wide-awake. I remember one of the most diminutive of the guild, coming on to the train as I was sorrowfully departing from the city, one morning, in war-time, and offering to sell me a copy of your Democratic pane-sake, and that I said, speaking after the manner of a dark-complexioned Republican, "Why, my poor little fellow, where will you go to, when you die, if you sell that naughty paper?" He turned his curly red head as he answered, "O, to the good place, I reckon—for I sell rather more Tribunes than Times-es. Chicago children are the busiest children in play and mischief under the sun. A friend of ours had occasion lately to punish her little four-year-old son by a quarter of an hour's solitary confinement in a closet. As she was about to close the door on him, he looked at her reproachfully and said, "You are making me waste my time."

I suppose I need hardly say that I like Chicago—like it in spite of lake-wind sharpness and prairie flatness, damp tunnels, swinging bridges, hard water, and easy divorces. With all the distinctive characteristics of a great city, it has preserved in a wonderful degree the provincial virtues of generous hospitality, cordiality, and neighborly kindness. A lady from your City lately said of it, very charmingly, "It is New-York, with the heart left in." I do not deny that the genuine Chicagoan has well learned the prayer of the worthy Scotchman: "Lord, gie us a guid conceit o' ourscls!" and that the prayer has been abundantly answered; but I do not think that his self-satisfaction often amounts to arrogance, or inclines him to rest on his laurels or his oars. He well knows, I think, that there is small profit in gaining the whole world to lose his own soul, and beautiful churches and benificent mission-schools, quiet deeds of mercy and munificent charities show that he finds ways of assent into the higher life, even from the busy dock, the noisy factory, the grimy foundery, and the tempestuous Exchange.

My memory of the journey from Washington, over the Northern Central and Pennsylvania Central, is a long panorama of surpassing Summer beauty, though, like Pilgrim, after leaving the "Delectable Mountains," I had to pass through the "Valley of the Shadow of Death," at Pittsburg, and, unlike him, had a world of trouble about my baggage. But, dear me, it is so long ago—nearly four weeks! In that time Chicago, very likely, has opened a tunnel, and stolen an acre of land from the lake, and drilled an artesian-well or two, and tossed up several good-sized hills in Lincoln Park.

As I have been happy in meeting several Washington friends here. NORMAN B. JUDD, kindly and courteous and witty as ever, and TRUMBULL, worthy of the good old name, and WILLARD, of Vermont, bound with his wife and son, on a pilgrimage to the grand mountains of Colorado in quest of health, kept, like the Holy Grail, in mysterious and majestic places. All these eminent legislators look, even in this extremely hot weather, far better than they did in the Capitol, from which God's pure air and sunshine are so rigorously excluded that it is a marvel that angina pectoris and apoplexy are not epidemic there. My opinion is that the peril of those who "go down to the sea in ships" is less by far than that of those who dwell for days and nights in those parliamentary pits at Washington. By the way, the Vice-President and his family have lately been on a visit to the city; all in excellent health. In their thankful happiness thousands will join heartily. G. G.

THE COMMUNE.

Lecture by Mr. Charles Moran Before the Liberal Club.

At the meeting of the Liberal Club last evening, Mr. CHARLES MORAN read a paper on "The Commune." The Communist movement in Paris was, he said, the natural consequence of the Empire, which, by the wasteful demolition and reconstruction of Paris, caused a species of national shops, which led the laborers to look to Government instead of to individual enterprise for employment. This state of affairs was aggravated by the war and by the siege of Paris, which led to the arming, clothing, feeding and paying of the National Guard and of the laborers who lacked work by the Government. The lecturer next explained the objects of the Commune, and said that those who controlled the movement advocated their theories, not with a view to more increased liberty, but to be able to attack liberty under the guise of law. The International Society was a warlike organization, not a peaceful one, and all the troubles in Paris and elsewhere arose from the attempts of one class to control others. Mr. MORAN traced the rise and progress of the International Society from the 28th of September, 1864, to the year 1870. He characterized their theories as the dreams of ignorant men, and pointed out the impracticability of carrying them out. They were not, he said, indebted to the working classes for the progress of humanity. To intellect, and not to the laboring classes, was the great progress of humanity due. As to any possible organization of workingmen suppressing the middlemen, it was, he said, the most preposterous idea ever promulgated. The speaker advocated the use of paper money, and said that the Government should abandon all species of banking and leave it to private parties. He did not believe that combination between capitalists was possible, as self-interest, which was infinitely more perfect than any human regulations, would be the controlling power. The lecturer, in conclusion, treated of socialism in its three phases of "association," "reciprocity," and the "right of labor," and he dissented from most of the views put forward by the representatives of Socialism.

Mr. INGALLS said there was excellent reason why working men should combine against institutions which were robbing them every day. [Cheers.]

Mr. LAVISON did not agree with the last speaker, and would not attempt to correct the fallacies which he uttered. He (Mr. LAVISON) was of opinion that the State had no proper concern with the education of the community. Their present system of school education was defective, as knowledge of the laws of nature was not taught in the schools.

Mr. STEPHEN PEARL ANDREWS thought that the Communists did not wish to do away with the General Government of the country. They opposed the Versailles Government because it should have retired after peace had been made. The speaker, in referring to the Internationals, said their movement was a great uprising for the improvement of society, and he believed and gloried in it. It was an indication of the rising tide which will inundate eternal injustice. [Cheers.]

Mr. MORAN having replied, the meeting adjourned.

Death of an Ex-Actor.

Mr. JAMES S. OATES, who some years ago was winning an excellent reputation as an actor when he was compelled to quit the stage on account of severe illness, died shortly after 8 o'clock last evening at the Grand Central Hotel. The cause of death was consumption. Mr. OATES, until stricken down in his last term of illness, moved in the theatrical profession as business manager for his wife, a well-known performer. He was born in the Southern States, and was aged about twenty-eight years.

SARATOGA.

Severe Criticism on the Creatures of the "Ring."

Springfield Knights Templar Drinking the Waters—A Brilliant Day on the Race-Course—St. Patrick Wins the Three-Quarter Dash—Longfellow Again a Winner.

The Great Race for the Saratoga Cup—Longfellow the Winner—Kingfisher a Good Second—St. Patrick Wins the Saratoga Stakes—Frogtown's Failure—Saratoga Notes.

From Our Special Correspondent.

SARATOGA, Friday, July 14, 1871.

The riot excitement which has existed here subsided to a great extent on the receipt of the New-York papers of the 13th. They gave us for the first time some conception of the nature and extent of the bloody business, and New-Yorkers slept in comparative peace, relieved from the awful thought that at home "a general war is impending," which was one of the announcements in the telegrams of Wednesday. The bitter feeling against HALL and the "Ring," however, is as outspoken as at first. A well-known and highly-respected gentleman, who has been a New-York citizen for twenty-four years, and who is an Irishman and a life-long Democrat, said yesterday that he had voted the Democratic ticket for the last time. He could not disguise from himself the fact that these riots were the direct result of the system the Democratic Party had pursued in New-York of pampering the dangerous classes for the sake of their votes.

TEMPERANCE VISITORS.

The sensation of yesterday in Saratoga was the visit of an excursion party of Knights Templar from Springfield, accompanied by Gilmore's Band, of Boston, led by Mr. ARBUCKLE. A part of the Troy Commandery of the Order joined them in that city, and they were received here by the Washington Commandery, of Saratoga, with the Saratoga Band. The procession, when it entered the village, numbered about 250, and made a fine appearance as it marched through the hall of the Grand Union Hotel, to the sounds of the newest march, played in Gilmore style. The visitors gave a ball in the evening, which will be numbered among the social events of the season. It took place in the Saratoga Music Hall. The orchestra occupying the stage inside the hall, and Gilmore's Band the piazza outside, alternated in playing through the evening. The splendid grounds in front of the hall were brilliantly lighted, affording a promenade, of which hundreds of couples availed themselves till the ball broke up at 1½.

RECENT ARRIVALS.

People are coming in very fast, Congress Hall being nearly full. Among the recent arrivals are Gen. Custer, Col. Hall and Gen. Pitcher, of the army; Lawrence Jerome, Col. F. A. Conkling, James Breslin, Col. John R. Fellows, P. Lorillard, Ira Shaffer, J. F. Kensett, Dr. Ormiston, of New-York, and Dr. Cuyler, of Brooklyn, and Potter Palmer, of Chicago.

THE RACES.

At 11 o'clock, when the carriages begun to crowd up to the hotels to take the first parties to the course, the skies were lowering in a most threatening manner. The crowd drove out as usual, however, but had scarcely got snugly ensconced on the stand before the rain begun to come down, and St. Patrick, the winner in the first race, came in in the midst of a shower. Soon it held up, however, and the great favorite for the cup, Longfellow, made his appearance on the track. The sporting crowd at once rushed upon the track, forsaking the pool sales, and surrounding the animal with a complete awning of umbrellas. Then the jockey started him round the track, and the hum of admiration rose louder and louder all over the field, and bets went up at once to $1,000 to $500 on the favorite. The crowd of betting men stood gazing at him with intense interest, and as the two came up to the starting point and got away, it was with the greatest difficulty that JOHN MORRISSEY and the constables of the course could get them out of the way to give the horses room. On they came toward the stand, and the crowd actually thrilled with excitement as they passed. Longfellow had drawn away at the start, and at the string had a lead of two lengths. The difference in the horses and in their style of running was evident at once. Longfellow has a magnificent dark brown color, a long drooping neck, and long barrel. His hind-quarters are rather low, and his stride is long and low, with a wonderful suggestion of confident power. Kingfisher is lighter colored, higher in the quarter, and has a short straight neck and sharp head. In place of the easy stride of Longfellow, he has a quick, sharp gait, which seems to require great exertion, and suggests a doubt of his capacity to sustain it for two and a quarter miles. Both horses were in magnificent condition. They rushed over the first mile at a terrific pace. Longfellow running long, easy, but swift as a greyhound, with little Kingfisher leap on leap behind him. At the mile-post stood three of the most experienced turfmen on the ground, with watches ready to take the mile-time, which was 1:40, the quickest time ever made on any track. Kingfisher was only two seconds behind. On the next mile the interval varied from four to six lengths, and as they came on the homestretch Kingfisher's rider plied the whip, and the gallant little horse answering, gained fast on the great Kentuckian, losing the race by only three lengths. Time—4:02¾. Longfellow had not been touched with the whip, but showed considerable exhaustion as the grooms pressed around to wash and blanket him.

The excitement that ensued was unparalleled. Men rushed about with tears in their eyes, vowing that such a horse as this was never foaled. The only perfectly cool person was Longfellow's owner, old JOHN HARPER, "Uncle JOHN," as he is universally called, who tottered along leaning on his cane and shouting directions to the negro boys who were grooming the victor.

From the first Col. HARPER has evidently felt confident that nothing could stand against Longfellow, though he is very cautious in his way of expressing himself. The run of conversation among the magnates of the course indicated the magnitude of Longfellow's triumph. Many backed him to beat Gladiateur's time. Col. BRUCE said that he believed no horse in England could compete with him, and Mr. BELMONT offered to bet a large amount that he could beat any horse in the world. Not a word was heard in dispraise of Kingfisher. All acknowledged that he had done wonders. Longfellow's price is now $100,000.

In the last race Frogtown had worse luck than on Wednesday, when he surprised every one by winning the sweepstakes, and came in last, Mr. BELMONT'S By the Sea winning by a neck.

The following is a summary of the events of the day:

FIRST RACE.

This was the Saratoga Stakes, for two-year olds; $50 entrance, play or pay, with $1,000 added; three-quarters of a mile; colts, 100 pounds; fillies, 97 pounds. It was the best betting race of the meeting thus far, and the knowing ones appeared to know nothing, and floundered about in a sea of trouble. Although Mr. MORRIS' entry was the favorite, Victoria, Mr. BELMONT'S entry was well thought of, as she ran second in the Flash Stakes, on Wednesday. The following were some of the pools sold:

St. Patrick	$425	$470	$850
McDaniel's entry	550	430	650
Victoria	300	180	350
Cameron	425	195	205
Frank Swift	110	160	250
	$1,820	$1,435	$2,105

They were started from the extra stretch, and St. Patrick immediately went to the front, with Cameron second, Swift third, McDaniel fourth, and Victoria last. As they turned into the main course at the half-mile pole, St. Patrick got two lengths away from Cameron, while McDaniel was third. On the lower turn St. Patrick got a better lead, passing the three-quarter pole four lengths ahead of Cameron and McDaniel, who were head and head, the others beaten off. As they turned into the home-stretch McDaniel shook off Cameron, taking second place, but could not reach St. Patrick, who won easily by five lengths in 1:20, McDaniel second, Victoria third, Swift fourth, and Cameron last, having been pulled up. Time—1:20.

SECOND RACE.

This was the grand race of the meeting, as far as testing the merits of the two four-year old cracks of the country. The reputations of Longfellow and Kingfisher thickened off the other ten entries for the Saratoga Cup, and so the contest was narrowed down to a dual. Everybody was on the qui vive, every eye was rivetted upon the pair as they made their appearance for the fray. In the betting Longfellow was an immense favorite, selling sometimes at $1,000 against $400, and at others at 3 to 1. BOBBY SWIM guided the great Longfellow to victory, and PALMER steered Kingfisher. The distance being two miles and a quarter, they were started from the three-quarter pole. The flag fell and they were off. The people were all excitement; cries of "Sit down!" were heard from all of the grand stand. Longfellow took the lead and came up the stretch past the stand with immense stride, leading Kingfisher three lengths. The pace was tremendous, and on the turn Kingfisher closed within two lengths of the favorite, passing the quarter-pole in that position. The distance between them remained unaltered until they reached the half-mile pole, when Longfellow opened the gap to three lengths, gradually increasing the distance to four lengths as they passed the stand for a second time. Going to the turn Kingfisher struggled gamely, but without avail, for Longfellow got further away, leading his apponent six lengths at the quarter pole, and the same to the half mile. Kingfisher then made another attempt to get closer, but without avail. Longfellow finally winning by three lengths easily in 4:02¾. The first mile of the race was run in one minute forty seconds, the fastest ever run in this country. This performance stamps Longfellow the champion of the turf, for he has met and gallantly defeated what was considered the best four-year old in the country. The following is the

SUMMARY.

SECOND RACE.—The Saratoga Cup; for all ages; $50 entrance, play or pay, $1,000 added; two miles and a quarter.

John Harper's br. c. Longfellow, four years, by imp. Leamington, dam Nanturah, by Brawner's Eclipse	1
A. Belmont's b. c. Kingfisher, four years, by Lexington, dam by imp. Eltham Lass, by Kingston	2

Time—4:02¾.

THIRD RACE.

This was for a purse of $600, for three-year olds, one mile and a half; the winners of the Belmont, Ladies' and Travers' Stakes being excluded. There were were four entries, and the contest proved to be close and exciting. The names of the contestants were Abdel Koree, By the Sea, John Merryman and Frogtown. In the pools Abdel Koree was a great favorite; Frogtown, owing to his victory on the first day, being well thought of and selling for second choice, By the Sea third, and Merryman bringing a few dollars. Few of the betting men took notice of the fact that Frogtown was to carry twenty pounds more weight, with a longer distance to run than he did in his first, and consequently they burnt their fingers. By the Sea, who sold third, won the race by a head's length, fairly stealing it at the end from the favorite. The following are the particulars: As the distance was a mile and a half, they were started from the half-mile pole, and when the flag fell after one false start, Abdel Koree jumped away in the lead, By the Sea and Merryman together, and Frogtown behind. As they came round the lower turn, Frogtown rushed past By the Sea and Merryman, and headed Abdel Koree, both passing the three-quarter pole simultaneously, a length in front of the other two, who were also together a length behind. Their positions remained unchanged past the stand to the quarter-pole, the only change at this point being that By the Sea had forged a little ahead of Merryman, gaining the third place. On the back stretch Abdel Koree cut loose from Frogtown, and at the half-mile pole led him a length, By the Sea going up and lapping Frogtown's quarter, Merryman still behind. On the lower turn By the Sea rushed past Frogtown, taking second place, and as they passed the three-quarter pole Koree was a length ahead of By the Sea, he being the same distance in front of Frogtown. As they came up the stretch Frogtown fell away to the rear, Merryman taking third place. The contest was between Koree and By the Sea, the former being ahead. The rider of Koree, thinking he had the race won easily, was taken off his guard, and By the Sea, coming with a rush, beat him out a head, amid the greatest excitement, in 2:40¼, John Merryman third and Frogtown fourth.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

Trinity Church-yard is now in its glory. The trees are all covered with beautiful foliage, the green sward, which is so carefully kept cut, is as soft as a carpet, and the flowers around on the grass send forth an exquisite perfume. Around the monuments of some of America's patriots there are quite large gardens, the flowers and shrubs being so arranged that their colors blend with artistic nicety. Some of the wreaths and bouquets, although dried and withered, are still there that were placed on the graves on Commemoration Day.

FREDERICK BADEN, No. 126 Meadow-street, Hoboken, made a complaint yesterday, that on the 29th of May, being about to go to Germany, he was induced to have his money changed at the office No. 157 Cedar-street, where he had $450 in United States currency changed into foreign gold, which, at the suggestion of JOHN LEIPOLD, was put in a leather bag and fastened upon the person of BADEN, who did not examine it until after the vessel had left port, when he found that he had been swindled out of $243. LEIPOLD, who claims to be a hackman, living at No. 81 Cortlandt-street, was held for trial.

The members of the Grant Club, of the Ninth Assembly District, met last evening at Bleecker Building, Mr. JAMES CUMMING in the chair. A report from the Committee on Primary Elections was received, nominating for President of the Association, GEORGE F. MERKLEE; Vice-President, CHARLES A. BENEDICT; Secretary, GEO. W. LUCKY, and Treasurer, HOWARD COAGILL. The Committee will meet again on Friday evening. After the transaction of some routine business, the Club adjourned until the second Friday in September.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Methodist Managers of the New-York City Church and Mission and Extension was held yesterday afternoon at No. 805 Broadway. The report of the Finance Committee was received, and showed that the amount of annual subscriptions since 1st April was $19,980. The Colored Mission, lately opened at the corner of Forty-first-street and Broadway, under the charge of Rev. Dr. BUTLER, was reported to be doing good service.

There are serious complaints that the contractors are now laying an inferior quality of Belgian pavement—that which is of a pale blue color, and which readily wears smooth. The contractors aver that, as they were forced to bid unusually low in order to obtain the work, they cannot afford to furnish the Belgian pavement of superior quality granite. Contractors should be compelled hereafter to specify particularly, at the time of making their bids, whether they propose to lay granite blocks, or only those of inferior quality.

"Pancake" is the name of a leathery composition which is used for the inner soles, stiffeners, and heels of shoes. Odds and ends of leather are mixed with paste to the thickness of an inch, and then heavily squeezed between iron rollers. The mess comes out in the shape of an oblong pancake, looking like a cross between a sheet of toffy candy and a cake of Navy plug tobacco. There are certain leathery things called pancakes served in some restaurants that are about as digestible as one of these.

The Chief Engineer of the steam-ship Rising Star, which arrived at this port on Thursday from Valparaso, brought with him a Guana, a very rare reptile. It is five feet eight inches in length, and very much resembles in shape a large lizard. It seems very contented in its cage and eats and thrives well on its ship's rations. Before long the public may expect to see this curious reptile in the Central Park Menagerie.

At 5½ o'clock P. M., yesterday, a fire occurred in the basement of No. 194 Fulton-street, occupied by GOTTLEIB SMIDT as a lager-beer saloon and restaurant, caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp, and before the flames were extinguished a damage of $1,500 occurred. The property destroyed was insured for $1,000 in the Globe Insurance Company.

JOSEPH H. LEVI, dry-goods merchant, doing business at No. 6 Bond-street, who was arrested for smuggling laces into this City from Europe, was again before Commissioner DAVENPORT yesterday. Terrible Fire.

ANOTHER TRIUMPH FOR THE STEAM SAFE.

American Steam Safe Company:

GENTLEMEN: We are pleased to inform you and the public that the steam safe which we purchased of you some time since was the means of preserving uninjured a large amount of debt, money, &c., exposed for several hours to a tremendous heat during the fire which destroyed our manufactory. The safe was in the ruins from Sunday evening, 25th inst., until 11 o'clock Monday forenoon, and on opening it the contents, embracing our books, policies of insurance, &c., were found to have sustained no injury, although it had been for a long time surrounded by burning timbers, &c. We also found that more than one-half of the water remained in the tubes, convincing us that the safe would have withstood the test many hours longer. We are so well pleased with the result that we shall use no other than your patent steam safe in the future, which we shall order at once. Respectfully yours,

NORTHAMPTON PEGGING-MACHINE CO.
D. C. ROGERS, Treasurer.

Northampton, July 5, 1871.

AMHERST COLLEGE.

The New Buildings—The Hyde Prize—Death Record—The Orations and Poem—Gymnastic Exercises.

From Our Special Correspondent.

AMHERST, Tuesday, July 11, 1871.

Each train has brought its full load of Alumni and visitors to town today. Many devoted the morning to looking at the sights indoors and out. Amherst is famed for its ever-flowing cabinets of rare specimens and the beautiful scenery visible from its towers. Much interest is manifested in the new College church now nearly completed. It is the gift of a son of President STEARNS, who is an East Indian merchant. It stands directly in the rear of East College, and that building will probably be removed when it is finished. The new edifice is for Sabbath services. Prayer will be held in the chapel as at present. All that money and art can do has been done to make the church convenient and attractive. A chime of bells has just been placed in the tower, the gift of GEORGE HOWE, Esq., of Boston. They are commemorative of the patriot Alumni of Amherst who fell during the war. They are at present chimed at various times during the day by a Boston professional, but there is a student who proposes to take them in charge soon. Mr. HOWE has provided him with an annual scholarship of $250. It seems that the Committee for the awarding of the Hyde Prize last night could not agree, and that an extra prize of $100 was given to J. W. SIMPSON by a gentleman present, for the excellent oratory he displayed. The following Alumni have died during the past year:

A roll of honor of Amherst men, prepared by the Faculty, is just published. It gives the military history of each Alumnus and undergraduate who served in the war. There were 169 Alumni and 78 students who were soldiers. Of these 12 died in battle and 28 of disease. The first soldier mentioned belonged to the class of '28, the last to '68.

At 2¾ the Seniors formed behind Brown's Brigade Band, of Boston, and marched to College Hall, under the leadership of Capt. DAVID HILL, Marshal. The hall was filled to overflowing. It was very tastefully trimmed. Over the pulpit were the words "Alma Mater." To the right "Class Motto '71, Unus Amore Ore Re." At the left, "Semi-Centennial, Terras Irradient." All of these were formed of massive evergreen letters. After prayer by President STEARNS and music by the Mendelssohn Quartet Club, of Boston, SAMUEL WATSON TENDELL, President of the day, introduced the orator, JOHN WOODRUFF SIMPSON. Mr. SIMPSON is a polished speaker and very self-possessed. "The Scholar's Place in the Work of the Century" was his subject. The oration reads well, aside from its excellent delivery. The poem, by SAMUEL PATTERSON BUTLER, was named "Sermons in Stones." It was forcibly delivered, filled with classic allusions concerning Tyre and ALEXANDER and Harlan. It gave an account of the famous Blarney Stone, and its exportation to Ireland.

During the delivery of the poem, a terrific shower came down, and everybody had a first-class opportunity to get wet. Umbrellas were in great demand, and it was rare sport to witness the manœuvres of those without them. The Class Ode was sung in the church. It would have been more sensible if the rest of the programme had been carried out there, but the class were unwilling to listen to the Grove Oration in-doors, so they adjourned to the big tent. There the band struck up, just as if it didn't rain, but they had to reverse their instruments frequently to let the water run out. They soon gave way to '71, who rendered "A Way we have at Old Amherst" and "Little Brown Jug" with spirit. Finally, as rivulets of water came pouring down through the canvas upon the umbrellas below, the orator, MAURICE DWIGHT CLARK, mounted the rostrum and began. But the depressing influence of the place was too much for him; he could not be heard, and in three minutes he was silent. His oration, as it is printed in The Student, is a pleasant and somewhat ironical production. It contains parting words to '71, '73, '74, and the citizens of Amherst. More college songs were indulged in, and then the class sat down and smoked the calumet. Pipes and lemonade were produced. The Sophomores sang this parting ode:

"The welkin rings with hearty cheers,
That tell of joy full sweet,
The children of her ripest years
Now kneel at Amherst's feet.
For one in heart and one in might,
In thought and action one,
As eagles, soon they take their flight
To seek the distant sun.

Though oft beset by doubt and fear,
Though clouds oft veiled the sky,
They saw hope's silver lining there,
And labored manfully.
Then hail the band that bravely fought!
Well tried and proven true;
For them the crown, of laurel wrought,
Is glory's fairest due.

The dawning future opes to view,
Fresh fields for thought and care,
With richest gain for each of you,
That nobly labors there.
And as you go, these classic halls
Their sad bereavement tell;
Their voice with true affection calls,
'God bless you! and farewell.'

The sighing elms take up the strain;
The rocks their sorrow tell:
And all join in the sweet refrain,
'God bless you! and farewell.'"

Cigars were provided for '73. HARMON NORTHRUP MORSE made a speech acknowledging the same. Milk was provided for the Freshmen. It is said they, in their eagerness, got at one of the cans and drank considerable in advance. The rain ceased about sunset.

The concert in the evening by the Mendelssohn Quintet and ADELAIDE PHILLIPS, with Prof. W. H. CLARK as accompanist, drew a very large house. This is the twenty-third season of the Club, and there are not many lovers of music in the land who have not heard them. They did themselves full credit, and Miss PHILLIPS was, of course, very enthusiastically encored. The Seniors will realize a good round sum, which goes toward defraying the expenses of the day. The concert lasted till after 10 o'clock, and closed the exercises of the day. But for the rain all would have passed off very pleasantly.

The match game of ball between the college nine and the Institute of Springfield resulted in favor of Amherst, 16 to 3.

An examination of Freshmen was held in Alumni Hall, this morning, and there will be another to-morrow. Forty-one raw men have lately been admitted to College and it is expected 1875 will enter with about seventy members. The Gymnastic Exhibition of '72 this morning, was a pleasant affair. First came a general exercise by the whole class, then performances on the different apparatus by fifteen picked men. The exhibition closed with singing "Farewell to Amherst Duties."

To-morrow the jubilee begins at 9½ A. M., in the tent. A speech of welcome to the Alumni will be pronounced by President STEARNS, which will be answered by Ex-Gov. ALEXANDER HAMILTON BULLOCK, ('36.) Prof. TYLER will then deliver an historical address of considerable length. In the afternoon, at 2 o'clock there will be a jubilee meeting of the Alumni in the tent, with speeches from several distinguished men. The College Glee Club give a concert in the evening, after which there is a social gathering of the Alumni at College Hall. The system of wearing class badges is a very good one. Through it the Alumni can readily recognize each other. To-morrow the Juniors repeat the exhibition in gymnastics for the benefit of the Alumni.

The Woman Question—Are Female Students to be Admitted?—More Donations.

From Our Special Correspondent.

AMHERST, Wednesday, July 12, 1871.

This has been the great day of the week. There has been none like it in the history of the College. There is one subject under discussion now that attracts almost as much attention as the Jubilee, and it is one of more absorbing interest to the world at large. That is the admission of women to the College. Two young ladies have applied to be admitted to the incoming Class. Their application was before the Trustees Tuesday, and the Faculty also submitted a letter to them, asking that the ladies might be allowed to enter, if they are found to be fitted. The friends of the new movement are pushing it strongly. Among them are Gov. BULLOCK and Mr. BEECHER. Some oppose it, and among them is said to be Prof. TYLER, on the ground that it will be unfavorable to the new Smith College for ladies about to be established at Northampton. Much outside influence is being used to open the doors of the College to the gentler sex at once. The papers of the State teem with leaders asking Amherst not to let the golden opportunity slip by unimproved.

A gift of $50,000 was yesterday announced from SAMUEL WILLISTON, of Easthampton. He has ever been a generous patron of the institution, and this is but one of many benefactions. The Trustees appointed Mr. BEECHER and Rev. Dr. ROSWELL D. HITCHCOCK ('36) to return their thanks to Mr. WILLISTON. The jubilee began at 9½ this morning. Prayer was offered by Rev. E. P. HUMPHREY, D. D., ('28,) of Louisville, Ky., eldest son of the late President HUMPHREY. The address of welcome to the Alumni, by President STEARNS, was a very happy effort. He greeted them as one standing in the midst of an old ancestral mansion, welcomes the returning children of the house.

The historical address, by Prof. TYLER, which followed was nearly two hours in length, and contained much matter which will soon be published in his forthcoming history of the College.

About 12½ a meeting of the Alumni was organized, with the President, A. B. ELY, of Boston, in the chair. He made a very striking speech. He could tell the Alumni how they could get $100,000 from the Legislature next Winter. With their co-operation he could soon raise $500,000. Hon. ALEX. H. BULLOCK, of Worcester, was elected President for the year; Rev. Dr. HUMPHREY, of Louisville, Ky., First Vice-President, and Prof. J. H. SEELYE Secretary and Treasurer. Some 2,500 people gathered in the tent at 2½ P. M. to listen to speeches from the Alumni. Gov. BULLOCK opened the meeting, and spoke for half an hour in a happy strain.

Prof. SNELL ('22) was then called to the stand, and delighted the audience for some time with his quaint humor. He was the eldest son, and had always staid at home. If there were any prodigals who had returned home today, he should not treat them badly. He carried the audience back to the birthday of the College. He was admitted as the first student Sept. 19, 1821. He entered the Senior Class, having been three years at Williams. On the same day fifty students were enrolled on the College books.

The latter part of the exercises was taken up with a somewhat stormy debate on a motion relative to asking the Legislature to grant to the Alumni the right of choosing the five Trustees now elected by the General Court. It was finally voted, as the desire of the Alumni, that they should elect such Trustees, and a Committee of seven was appointed to confer with the President and Trustees in regard to the matter. This is the list: B. Sanford, A. B. Ely, G. F. Homer, E. H. Kellogg, W. M. Pomeroy, E. K. Alden, H. G. DeForest.

Just at twilight a musical memorial service was held on the College grounds. It was in honor of those who fell in the war, and was composed of national airs, played alternately on the chimes and by BROWN'S Brigade Band. Six hundred and sixty-four Alumni are registered in the book at Walker Hall as present in town. Large cards are hung in one of the rooms there containing the names and places of sojourn of those who are here. All the classes that have graduated since 1822 are represented, except '25. The following classes have reunions, and most of them suppers at the hotels, Professors' houses, and other places in town: '42, '43, '45, '48, '53, '60, '61, '67, and probably several others. Most of these occur today.

To-morrow the Seniors will speak their pieces, on the stage, and the Alumni will dine at 1½ P. M. At 4 there will be a regatta on the river.

Stories of Beecher—His Speech—Other Speeches—Commencement.

From Our Special Correspondent.

AMHERST, Thursday, July 13, 1871.

HENRY WARD BEECHER graduated here in 1834. There is a mass of floating tradition concerning his college life which is no doubt rapidly increasing as the years pass away. It is said that during his first year in college he devoted much of his time to the pursuit of senior studies, because he thought them better adapted to his mind than those his class were upon. Later in the course he went back and reviewed those same neglected authors. It is also said that Prof. SNELL told him on the day of his graduation that the Faculty would never hear from him again. He and the Professor had many a spat during the four years. BEECHER was very fond of "cutting" recitation, much oftener in fact than was to the Professor's taste. One day after having listened to a long lecture, because of absenteeism, HENRY WARD asked Prof. SNELL what was the use of his going to mathematical recitation, anyhow, "to discipline your mind," replied the Professor. "Oh, well," said BEECHER, "I shan't go any more if that is all, for I can discipline my mind enough by inventing excuses to you for not being there." About four miles from college is a small brick schoolhouse where the great preacher used to go to hold prayer-meetings. It is on the border of Belchertown, not very far from the birth-place of the editor of Scribner's Monthly. There are people in that town that well remember Mr. BEECHER's youthful exhortations. He still clings to his dislike of titles. Last evening a gentleman accosted him with, "How are you, Doctor?" "I am well," he replied, "all but the Doctor." His speech yesterday was exceedingly humorous. Gov. BULLOCK introduced him as one who, while on this ground, "wasted his life in college honors." After replying to the raillery, he read a letter from RICHARD SALTER STORRS, D. D., ('39,) of Brooklyn, written from Italy, and caused much merriment by omitting a part which he said was a love-letter to President STEARNS. He had heard a great deal about all the grandees of the College, but he had heard nothing about the hard times the poor students had in the College. He had to suffer when here, was afraid that he should be translated at times—at least the translation troubled him most when in examination. Every hair of Prof. FISKE's head stood up like a spur, and he had the benefit of them all. He regarded Prof. SNELL as, in the main, an upright man, but he knew well that during his course the Professor's heart swelled with envy because of his (BEECHER'S) original demonstrations in mathematics. he seldom called him up during the latter part of the course. The Faculty never consulted him in regard to what appointment they should confer upon him, and he left town with only an ordinary sheepskin, such as nature and the colleges provide for all graduates. Then Mr. BEECHER told what he did while at Amherst. There was no student who tramped more, or knew where the gray squirrels lived, or where the ice lingered longest, or the moss was greenest, or the birds sang the sweetest, as well as he. After speaking of HITCHCOCK and HUMPHREY, he told of the glorious sunrises that oftimes gladdened his boyhood eyes, as he waited for them morning after morning perched in the chapel tower. Few colleges can boast of natural scenery like this. Yale and Harvard cannot, perhaps Williams may. The Trustees are to establish a Professorship of History and Political Economy here soon. The discussion respecting the admission of women to the College has nothing to do with the question of woman's suffrage. He believed in that, but it is wholly aside from this, which is a question of method and economy. How can we educate the greatest number at the least expense? If one church, one catechism, one minister, will do for both sexes, why will not one teacher? All ladies who come here will have their mind made up to what is before them. If they cannot keep up with their classes, they will leave, just as boys do. He believed that if they were strong enough to care for the household they are strong enough to obtain a liberal education. Woman can stand the college if she can stand the nursery. She will make a womanly use of a college education as men make a manly use of it. She will be more of a woman for it. This is not a novel question—it comes in the ordinary course of things. It is our first duty to answer it aright.

Rev. R. D. HITCHCOCK, of New-York, followed Mr. BEECHER. He protested, in the name of New-England colleges, against the multiplication of universities in this country. Harvard and Yale are enough. We have no pedestals for more. He referred with pride to the fact that every one of the fifty classes at Amherst will soon have a scholarship, and that his own class, '36, has three.

The last speaker of note was Prof. PARK, of Andover, and no Alumnus of Amherst, who appeared on the stage, spoke better. He was rather inclined to oppose the ground taken by BULLOCK and BEECHER, and he felicitously quoted an old joke of Prof. HUMPHREY'S about a student who was struck by a gal-vanic battery.

The Alumni reunion, last night, was largely attended; many ladies were present. The Mendelssohns provided music. Commencement proper is a thing so much in the ordinary course that it attracts very little attention this year. The weather is fine, and all things have passed off well. Six hundred and seventy-three Alumni were registered at 11¼ A. M. The valedictory was given by EDWIN MUNSELL BLISS, of Constantinople, Turkey, and the salutatory by JOSEPH NATHANIEL BLANCHARD, of Albany, N. Y. There were nineteen speakers and fifty-nine graduates. The Alumni dinner was in Agricultural Hall, at 1½ P. M. The room was very full and the air very close. On this account no speeches were made, except one by the President. He announced the number of Alumni in town, and that all the classes were represented, '25 having reported at the last moment; also, that a scholarship fund of $50,000 will soon be raised; also, that Rev. WM. H. WARD, ('56,) editor of the New-York Independent, had translated the inscriptions on the Ninevah tablet—a thing that has often been tried, but never been done by any American scholar before. Three cheers were given for Mr. WARD. The President then told the Alumni that he did not expect to be able to attend the centennial celebration of the College, but that he should ever be their well-wisher. Three cheers were given for the President. The assembly then sang the Commencement Dinner Hymn. Hundreds are leaving town on the afternoon trains.

OUR SCHOOLS.

Two New Public School-Houses to be Erected—Description of the Proposed Buildings—Interesting Educational Statistics.

Among the new buildings to be erected in this City, plans for which have recently been submitted at the Department of Buildings, are two new school-houses, to be located respectively in the Seventeenth and Nineteenth Wards. The following is a description of the proposed structures, both of which will be erected under the auspices of the Department of Public Instruction:

The site in the Seventeenth Ward selected for the purpose is on the south side of Fifth-street, 200 feet west of First-avenue, embracing five City lots, together forming a plot in size 100 feet front by 96 feet 2 inches in depth, the street numbers now being from No. 326 to 332. The building, when finished, will cover the entire front of the plot, with a depth of 92 feet. It will be in height four stories, together 72 feet from the curb, and the general design, both in exterior appearance and interior arrangements, similar to the new school-houses lately erected. The entrance will be through a tower in the centre, which tower will be surmounted by a mansard roof, the other roofs of the edifice being flat. The material to be used in construction is pressed brick, the first story being faced with granite. In addition to the grand staircase, the building will be provided with two other stairways connecting with the various stories, both fire proof. Each story above the first will contain an assembly room, teachers' room, and four class rooms, while on the first floor will be a play room for girls, janitor's apartments, &c. All modern improvements will be introduced into the building. The total cost of the structure is estimated at $90,000. The school-house is for a new school to be formed immediately and its erection is deemed necessary owing to the overcrowded condition of the two primary schools now in existence in the Seventeenth Ward. This necessity is apparent when the average attendance at these two schools, for the month of June last is stated, which was as follows: At No. 13, located on Houston near Essex-street, daily attendance, 1,889, and at No. 19, located in Fourteenth-street, near First-avenue, 1,733. In this connection it may also be stated that the average daily attendance at all the schools of the ward, in which there are in all six school buildings, including those of higher grade, for the month of June, was 3,519. The number of the new school will probably be 59, the last Public School established being numbered 58.

The second building to be erected for the Nineteenth Ward is to be located on the south side of Fifty-seventh-street, 310 feet east of Third-avenue, and is designed for the use of Primary Public School No. 21, now occupying a hired building in the immediate vicinity. The erection of the new school-house arrises from the fact that the owner of the building now used demanded a rent so extortionate for a continuance of the lease that it was thought advisable either to break up the school or to build, which latter course was adopted. The accommodations in the hired building are also always been limited and not such in any respect as the wants of the school demanded. The new school-house will, when completed, be in size 100 by 95 feet, four stories in height, and erected on a lot of the same frontage, by 100 feet 5 inches in depth. The design of the proposed structure is the same as those above described, and the cost also is to be $90,000. The average daily attendance for June, at the last named school, was 485.

The designs for both the proposed new buildings were drawn in the office of A. MACVEY, Superintendent of Buildings and Repairs for the Department, by DAVID I. STAG, architect, and the finished structures in their appearance will bear evidence of taste and skill. The builder of the Seventeenth Ward building is TERENCE KIERNAN, while the work in the Nineteenth Ward has been entrusted to MORAN & ARMSTRONG.

Summer Reception of Grammar School No. 11.

A very large audience assembled at this school on Friday, to assist in the "Summer Reception." The exercises were very interesting and novel. The Principal brought the two Houses of Congress into his school-room, as they appeared on the 11th of February, 1869, in joint Convention, counting the electoral votes of the States for President. The discussions between various Senators and Representatives on the questions of admitting the votes of Louisiana and Georgia were very spirited, and excited great interest in the audience. The idea was well carried out by about thirty debaters, and everything was historically correct. Master JENKINS as Speaker Colfax, FINNIGAN as Vice-President Wade, and KINSELLA as Ben. F. Butler, carried their parts with flying colors. WM. WIDDONS gave, in a dignified and manly way, the speech of WEBSTER in reply to HAYNE, so well known in our past senatorial history. In accordance with the season the school-room was everywhere festooned with flowers, a score of canary birds filled it with nature's melody. Judge VAN VORST presided. Superintendent KIDDLE addressed the College graduates, and Dr. HOWE introduced Master STEPHEN JENKINS, who recently bore off the prize of Hon. S. S. COX's cadetship to the Naval Academy upon competitive examination with the brightest pupils in the six schools in his Congressional district. The boys presented a bouquet to every lady in the audience, and wore nosegays at their button holes. Prof. SCOTT, of the City College, made a very eloquent and touching speech, and the veteran JAMES W. GERARD spoke humorously and pleasantly. The occasion was original, creditable and pleasant. President HUNTER, of the Normal College, ISAAC BELL, SAMUEL A. LEWIS, and many other well known citizens were present.

A Centennial Observance.

The Reformed Church in this country has made much and substantial progress during the last twenty-five years. Its large resources have been employed in the endowment of its Collegiate and Theological Institutions, and in an active missionary policy. Its General Synod was organized in 1771. This is consequently its Centennial Year. For its proper observance an effort will be made to raise the sum of $1,000,000, for proper denominational work. A committee, of which Rev. E. S. PORTER, D. D., is chairman, was appointed at the recent session of the Synod, in Albany, to aid in raising the above-named sum. The first public meeting in behalf of this worthy enterprise, will be held to-morrow evening, in the Collegiate Church, corner of Fifth-avenue and Twenty-ninth-street. Addresses are to be delivered by Rev. Messrs. PORTER, TAYLOR, ORMISTON and GANSE.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The market was again dull yesterday with no transactions either at the Exchange or elsewhere to report. For next week the prospect for increased activity is not much brighter, for the only really important auction thus far advertised is the continuation sale of Flushing lots, under the direction of JOHNSON & MILLER, which takes place on Wednesday. Several minor sales of City real estate, under Court orders, will also be made at the Exchange during the week, the details of which will be given on Monday. The market generally, however, just at present is an uninteresting one.

For the past six months, ending with the 1st inst., the enterprising auction firm of E. H. LUDLOW & CO., No. 3 Pine-street, and No. 35 Union-square, have disposed of property amounting in the aggregate to $3,754,262 05, a large exhibit.

THE RIOT.

Funerals of Several of the Mob Yesterday.

The Dead of the Ninth Regiment to be Buried To-Morrow.

Sympathy for Rioters Expressed by Tammany Clubs—Gov. Hoffman Denounced—A Policeman Beaten—Ugly Expressions of Feeling by Hibernians.

There has rarely been a duller day at Police Head-quarters than was yesterday. The Board held a meeting, but transacted no business of importance, and very few persons were to be seen at any time about the building but those regularly attached. About noon A. OAKEY HALL entered from the rear, although it has always heretofore been his custom to reach the Commissioners' rooms, or Superintendent's office, by the front entrance from Mulberry-street. He came for conference with Mr. KELSO, but was disappointed, as the Superintendent left the building at an early hour, and was absent much of the day.

AT THE MORGUE.

There was no excitement at the Morgue yesterday, although the visitors were much more numerous than upon ordinary occasions. To accommodate the vast crowds that came on Thursday the gates were thrown open. Yesterday everything resumed its wonted channels, and HARRY REED, the keeper of the dead-house, greeted somewhat his labor of handling corpses and answering the questions of those in search of the missing. There are now but two bodies in the Morgue awaiting identification; these will be buried today, with all others in the house, if not claimed early this morning. One of the bodies is now so far decomposed as to be beyond recognition.

Of the six unknown bodies remaining unclaimed last night, the following have been identified:

PATRICK MONAHAN, aged twenty years, who lived at No. 88 Henry-street, and was shot through the head. The body has been removed to the residence of his brother, No. 90 Henry-street.

JOSEPH GAHERTY, aged nineteen years, who lived at No. 81 Carmine-street.

JOHN MULLEN, twenty-four years of age, who lived at No. 262 West Twenty-ninth-street, and had been shot through the eye.

WILLIAM GILLOUGH, aged thirty years, of Hudson City.

ADDITIONAL DEATHS YESTERDAY.

The list of casualties from the riot was augmented as follows yesterday:

JAMES A. CLARK died at Mount Sinai Hospital from gunshot wounds in the right arm and right thigh. Deceased was forty-four years of age, was a native of this City, was married, had five children, and lived at No. 139 East One Hundred and Tenth-street. He was returning home from his place of business, at No. 228 West Twenty-sixth-street, at the moment the volley was fired.

MICHAEL LEAHY, a native of Ireland, thirty-nine years of age, died in Bellevue Hospital from a gun-shot wound through the body received during the riot. Deceased lived at No. 204 Second-avenue, where he leaves a family.

THOMAS DOUGDALE, thirty-four years of age, who lived at No. 266 West Twenty-fifth-street, who was shot in the left side during the riot while standing at the corner of Twenty-fifth-street and Eighth-avenue, died at 9 o'clock on the evening of the 13th inst.

MICHAEL O'SHEA, twenty years of age, shot through the head during the riot, died in Mount Sinai Hospital. His residence was not given.

A. P. GILBERT, the Herald compositor who was shot in the back while standing on the corner of Eighth-avenue and Twenty-fourth-street, died at a late hour Thursday night in Bellevue Hospital.

WILLIAM MCGRATH, twenty-five years of age, who was a coachman, and lived at One Hundred and Nineteenth-street and Second-avenue, died at a late hour last evening, in Bellevue Hospital, from a gun-shot wound. His arm had to be amputated after his admission to the hospital.

The deaths from the deadly volley fired in Eighth-avenue now number forty-four, and there are several others of the wounded who are not expected to recover.

All the cases resulting from the riot are in charge of Coroner YOUNG, who has granted burial permits, and will hold inquests next week, probably beginning on Wednesday. It is understood that voluminous testimony will be taken, and the question of the firing by the military, it is alleged, will be proved.

A POLICEMAN ASSAULTED.

Officer MCCOY, of the Seventh Precinct, who was on the sick list, was in Pike-street at an early hour yesterday, when he was attacked by some unknown persons who beat him severely and cut him over the right eye, inflicting a severe wound. His assailants fled before Officer FERRIS, who heard the cries of his comrade and ran to his rescue, could arrive at the scene, and they thus escaped both capture and recognition. It is supposed, however, that they were some of the Irish rioters seeking a cowardly revenge upon the Police.

A FOOLISH STORY CONTRADICTED.

A statement has been made by the evening journals to the effect that the armory of the Seventh Regiment is decorated with Orange flags. The story bears its absurdity on its face, though many may be so ignorant as to believe it. The truth is that the non-commissioned staff of the Seventh Regiment have the regimental hospital flag hanging over the door of their room to denote the quarters of the Hospital Steward. This little flag is yellow in color, and very dingy at that, from constant use during the past few years. An excited reporter perhaps noticed the flag, and being color blind for the moment at once jumped to the conclusion that it was the hateful color. The members of the Seventh Regiment desire it to be distinctly understood that they take no part in the disputes of the day, and desire to merely do their duty as good soldiers.

SOME RIOTERS ADMITTED TO BAIL—OTHERS COMMITTED.

Of the rioters committed on the previous day for examination by Justice HOGAN, all those against whom there was no other charge than that they were arrested with arms upon their persons, were yesterday held in $500 to keep the peace. The following gave the required bonds and were liberated:

MARTIN FOILET, bailed by P. T. CARNEY, No. 79 Cortlandt-street.

THOMAS M. GILMARTIN, bailed by JAS. FLANIGAN, No. 197 Chatham-street.

JOHN FALON, bailed by P. T. CARNEY, No. 79 Cortlandt-street.

ANDREW BOWNEY, bailed by P. T. CARNEY, No. 79 Cortlandt-street.

MICHAEL MALVIN, bailed by MARTIN ORKLEY, No. 113 Mott-street.

PATRICK KELLY, bailed by ALEXANDER PATTEN, No. 79 Baxter-street.

EDWARD CROOK, bailed by PATRICK CAMPBELL, No. 448 West Seventeenth-street.

PATRICK J. KELLY, bailed by THOMAS DUFFEY, No. 228 East Thirty-seventh-street.

MICHAEL LANIHAN, bailed by JOHN MCGUIRE, No. 204 Second-avenue.

PATRICK GREEN, bailed by JOHN MCGUIRE, No. 204 Second-avenue.

JOHN MCCABE, bailed by JOHN EARLY, No. 221 Elizabeth-street.

The following were held for trial at the General Sessions:

HUGH DEERY, inciting to riot, $2,000 bail.

JOHN CONNOR, inciting to riot, $2,000 bail.

THOMAS COLEMAN, inciting to riot, $2,000 bail.

BERNARD MCGINNIS, reporter of the Star, for carrying the "billy," a concealed weapon, was held in $1,000, and was bailed by RICHARD WALTERS, No. 21 East Broadway.

EDWARD LAMB, assault on Detective CLAPP while the latter was in the discharge of his duty [illegible] was held in $500, and bailed by [illegible], No. 330 King-street.

JOHN [illegible], carrying concealed weapons, [illegible] bail.

[illegible] SAVOLEN, same offense, $1,000 bail.

JAMES B. MCHUGH and JOHN MCHUGH, who had been arrested by Inspector WALLING, as stated in the TIMES of yesterday, were held in $500 to keep the peace, and were bailed, but the names of the bondsmen do not appear on the papers.

THE FUNERAL OF THE DEAD OF THE NINTH REGIMENT.

Orders were issued yesterday for the parade of the Ninth Regiment on Sunday, to pay the last honors to the members of that regiment who fell on Wednesday. The Fourteenth Regiment, of Brooklyn, and four companies of the Twenty-first, of this City, will parade as an escort, and Superintendent KELSO will detail 200 policemen, drawn from all the precincts of the City, with all the captains, one sergeant and a patrolman from each precinct, the whole force under the command of Inspector DILKS. The regimental orders are as follows:

HEAD-QUARTERS, NINTH REGIMENT,
THIRD BRIGADE, FIRST DIVISION, N. G., S. N. Y.,
NEW-YORK, July 14, 1871.

GENERAL ORDERS, NO. 8.—1. The officers and members of this command will assemble in full-dress uniform, with white trousers, gloves and belts, on Sunday next, July 16, for the purpose of paying the last tribute of respect to our late comrades, Sergt. WYATT and Private PAGE. Roll-call of companies at the Armory at 1 o'clock P. M.

2. Non-commissioned staff, band and field music, with respect to the Adjutant at the same time and place. Field and staff (dismounted) will report to the Colonel at 1½ o'clock P. M.

3. The members of companies F and K will wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

4. Officers of the Regiment will wear the badge of mourning on the day of the funeral.

(Official.) By order of Col. JAMES FISK, JR.
EDGAR S. ALLEN, Adjutant.

The Committee of Arrangements request members of the theatrical profession to attend the funeral of the late HENRY C. PAGE, which will take place on Sunday, 16th inst., at 2 P. M., from Calvary Church, corner Fourth-avenue and Twenty-first-street. The remains will be taken to Woodlawn Cemetery and there be interred in a plot belonging to the Ninth Regiment.

LABORERS ON THE PUBLIC WORKS DISCHARGED.

Upon inquiry at the Department of Public Works, yesterday, our reporter was informed that a large gang of men who did not come to their work on Wednesday, had been discharged, and that a great number were suspended from employment, as a punishment for quitting work on the day of the riot. The names of the men, he said, were to be furnished to the Department by Chief Engineer TRACY.

The Chief stated that a large number of men, employed by contractors, quitted work on that day, but the Department were not responsible for them, and could therefore take no notice of their action.

The report in yesterday's TIMES in relation to a meeting of one of the City Departments on Thursday, at which a resolution was adopted requesting Superintendent WESTERVELT to furnish a list of the names of the men employed by the Department who absented themselves from work on the day of the riot, should have read Department of Docks, and not as published, Department of Parks.

FUNERALS OF RIOTERS—RETALIATION THREATENED—THE GOVERNOR DENOUNCED.

The funeral of JOHN REILLY, one of the rioters who was shot in Eighth-avenue on Wednesday last, took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, in East Sixty-sixth-street, near First-avenue. There were about twenty carriages in attendance, but the paucity of mourners was remarkable, there not being more than two or three hundred present when the funeral started for Calvary Cemetery, but on its way it augmented considerably in numbers. One of the brothers of the deceased had charge of the funeral arrangements. He felt a pride in announcing that he paid or was to pay all the expenses, but he refused to give or permit to be given any information to the reporters. Some of the newspapers were denounced, and it would not have been safe for reporters of those journals to avow themselves. Four stalwart fellows came up to the writer in a menacing attitude, but he was fortunate enough, by a little diplomacy, to calm their resentment, which was at the point of effervescence. The reporter got into conversation with a few of the leaders, who made no secret of their resolve to retaliate on the Orangemen next year. "Next 12th of July," said they, "we'll be fully prepared to meet them." The reporter quietly asked: "Why not allow the Orangemen the same privilege which you claim for yourselves?" The reply was: "I'd allow them nothing. They are a parcel of cut-throats; they are a set of perjurers, who do not believe what they swear, and they have no right to bring their English prejudices to this country. I am not an Irishman, but an American born, and my sentiments are held by thousands of others."

Gov. HOFFMAN was next denounced in very strong language for issuing his proclamation, and the speaker announced that he, Gov. HOFFMAN, would never again receive a vote from any of the friends of the "murdered men." Mayor HALL was eulogized for the course which he pursued, "but," said the speaker, "HOFFMAN has killed the Democratic Party in this State."

The deceased was twenty-eight years of age, and has left a widow and two children.

The flags on the Grand Opera-house and the Ninth Regiment Armory were flying at half-mast yesterday, as a mark of sorrow for the loss of the gallant National Guardsmen who fell in Wednesday's struggle.

OTHER FUNERALS.

HANNAH CONNOR, aged 15 years, the adopted daughter of MARY and the late JOHN HANBY, was buried from Bellevue Hospital. She met her death while standing on Eighth-avenue watching the procession.

The funeral of CHARLES BUCKLAND, Jr., who fell during the firing, took place at No. 509 West Twenty-Eighth-street, and was attended by a large circle of friends, and by Company H of Hawkin's Zouaves, of which the deceased was a member.

The funeral of CHARLES H. PETTIT, the young man who was shot at the corner of Eighth-avenue and West Twenty-fourth-street, on Wednesday, will take place at the Methodist Episcopal Church, in West Eighteenth-street, near Eighth-avenue, on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The deceased was an exemplary young man, and had business in the neighborhood at the time of the firing of the volley.

IRISH DEMOCRATIC UNION—GOV. HOFFMAN DENOUNCED.

A special meeting of the General Committee of the Irish Democratic Union was held last evening in Masonic Hall, Thirteenth-street, ANTHONY A. GRIFFIN in the Chair and J. DUFFY, Secretary.

The special business for which the meeting was called was to consider the action of the authorities in regard to the Orange parade. Very strong feeling was manifested on the subject and denunciations of Gov. HOFFMAN were bitter and general. Several members strongly advocated the passing of resolutions, pledging the Irish Democratic Party to not only not support HOFFMAN, but to use all their influence against him at the next election at which he is a candidate for any office. They openly charged him with being the enemy of all the Irish Catholic citizens, and the cause of the riot and slaugeter on Wednesday last. They contended that he had no right whatever to interfere in the affairs of the City, in opposition to the expressed wishes of the majority of its inhabitants, and against the promulgated orders of the Mayor.

Other members, who did not allow themselves to be carried away so much by their feelings, counseled coolness and prudence, and suggested that it would be better to wait for a week or so till the public sentiment among the Irish population calmed down before they took any definite and decisive action in the matter. All, however, seemed to be imbued with the same spirit of hostility to the Governor on account of his revoking the order prohibiting the Orange parade. After much debate the matter was left over till early next week, when a meeting will be held, for the purpose of giving expression to their feeling and opinion on the conduct of the Governor in a set of resolutions. After the transaction of some routine business the meeting adjourned.

DEMOCRATIC SYMPATHY FOR A DEAD RIOTER.

At a meeting of the Wm. M. Tweed Benevolent Association, held last evening at No. 119 Centre-street, resolutions were adopted sympathizing with the family of TIMOTHY SULLIVAN, a member of the Association, who got killed in the riot on Wednesday, and a subscription was taken up for their relief, and over $60 were realized. The Association will turn out in a body with their badges and banner at SULLIVAN'S funeral on Sunday.

IRISH DEMOCRATIC CLUB NO. 11.

At a meeting of the Irish Democratic Club No. 11, held at No. 205 Avenue A, last evening, Mr. LAWRENCE, of Club No. 2, spoke in reference to the late riots on the occasion of the Orange procession, and condemned Gov. HOFFMAN'S proclamation permitting the parade. He said the Orangemen had no right to insult 200,000 citizens by celebrating in New-York the ascendency of one party over another more than 200 years ago in another hemisphere. He advised the Irish citizens to organize and unite, and at the polls at the next election to show how they regarded the conduct of the Governor.

REGIMENTAL REPORTS.

Gen. SHALER'S staff officers were kept busy yesterday in receiving reports from the commandants of the various regiments in the First Division regarding their operations on Wednesday. It was understood that Col. CLARK, of the Seventh Regiment, reported through Gen. VARIAN that the members of his command did not fire without orders, and that their guns were aimed at rioters in the houses, and not at any person on the street. He also denied the charge that one of his men fired the fatal shot which struck Sergt. WYATT, of the Ninth Regiment. So far as could be ascertained, some of the reports charged the Seventh with disobedience of orders. Gen. SHALER will prepare a detailed account of the operations of the troops under his command as soon as he has received reports from all of his regimental commanders.

FACTS AND RUMORS.

Intense indignation was expressed very generally among the Police yesterday, at the conduct of Capt. JOSEPH H. PETTY, Thirteenth Precinct, in censuring the military for firing upon the mob. As he violated one of the longest-established and most imperative rules of the Department, in making a communication to the public, it is presumed that he will be subjected to discipline by the Board. The only comment yet made on the affair by the Commissioners has been in unofficial shape, and to the effect that Capt. PETTY has been very indiscreet.

The friends of Capt. SPENCER, Company K, Ninth Regiment, will be pleased to learn that he was not so seriously injured as was at first reported. When the firing commenced the Captain bent his head to escape the leaden hail, and endeavored to get to his position in the rear of his company. As he was passing by a wagon some one in the vehicle dealt him a blow on the head with a bar of iron or some heavy instrument, which felled him to the ground insensible. He was taken into a neighboring house, where he recovered after a while, and so great and excited were the crowd that himself and a soldier of the Ninth had to disguise themselves in order to escape from their retreat. After arriving at his home Capt. SPENCER was attacked with internal bleeding, but his physician is of opinion that with rest and careful nursing he will speedily recover. His father is Professor of Greek in the College of the City of New-York, and is now absent on a visit to Amherst.

A rumor was current, yesterday, that several mass-meetings were to be called during the ensuing week at the instance of some prominent Irish citizens in regard to the action of the authorities in the recent riot. No formal announcement of the intention has yet been made, and no definite information on the subject has been obtained.

President SMITH yesterday granted leave of absence for one week, with pay, to Patrolman MESCHUTT, of the Fifteenth Precinct, who was seriously injured during the attack upon the rioters in Prince-street. He was struck on the shoulder by a brick, and had his left arm disabled early in the affray, but refused to be classed among the injured, and remained constantly on duty during the day and ensuing night. His wound by this neglect had become so serious as to unfit him for service.

At 8 o'clock yesterday morning, Officer DEAN, of the Twenty-first Precinct, found, in an ash-box, at the corner of Twenty-eighth-street and Second-avenue, a black sack coat, with a bullet hole in the back; a white under-shirt, over-shirt, drawers, and a pair of black pantaloons; all of the articles being covered with blood.

Many of the soldiers of the New-Jersey National Guard are dissatisfied with their treatment while under orders on Wednesday. The State has never interested itself to secure them proper armories, and each company has been obliged to find its own. On Wednesday they were confined in these places most of which are next to the roof and terribly heated. They were also ill-provisioned, and were personally responsible for expenses, which were rather heavy. Col. PECKWELL, of the First Regiment, was so dissatisfied with the state of affairs that he has resigned.

The Orangemen of Newark had intended to join in the parade in New-York on the 12th inst., but gave up their design after hearing the order of Superintendent KELSO. As it was too late to make other arrangements, they postponed their celebration indefinitely. They have heretofore held their parade in Newark, and followed it with a picnic in some suburban village. This plan will be pursued this year, and the celebration will take place on the 10th of next month They will parade and will have a picnic. No disorder of any kind has followed their demonstrations in Newark, and none is anticipated this time.

A special meeting of the directors of the Ancient Order of Hibernians was held last evening in Hibernia Hall, on Gold-street, Brooklyn, but the reigning powers refused admission to the members of the Press. They, however, intimated that the object of the meeting was to make arrangements for the pic-nic which they propose to hold on the 29th inst.

The funeral of MICHAEL MCCORMACK, who lost his life on Eighth-avenue, took place from No. 381 Second-avenue, and was solemnized according to the Catholic service. A large number of persons followed the body to the grave in carriages.

A party of young Americans organized in East Fortieth-street, near Third-avenue, last evening, under the name of Washington Post, and passed resolutions, determining not to allow any foreign mob to rule this City.

PATRICK HARVEY and JAMES LYNCH, who were in Mount Sinai Hospital from wounds received in the riot, were yesterday taken home to their friends, the first residing at No. 246 West Thirtieth-street, and the second to No. 229 Houston-street. There are many cases in the Hospital in a critical condition, but the surgeons preferred not to specify them, for fear of alarming the patients to their injury.

The "World" and Gov. Hoffman.

From the Brooklyn Eagle, July 14.

As a resource of bigoted partisans who lament the suppression of a riot in a Democratic City, by a Democratic Governor, the New-York World is a success. To cover its swift and abject indorsement of the Hall-Kelso order, an endorsement which amazed all journalists and enraged all freemen, that paper puts up the Executive of the State as a target for missiles which should be exclusively left to the meanest and narrowest of his political opponents.

Willing to wound but afraid to strike, it insinuates in suppositive form slurs, sneers and flippant criticisms, which become the positive charges of unfriendly prints, putting the Governor on trial as to his motives and diligence, in an act redounding more to his fame and to our security than any other deed that shines as the brightest gem in the coronet of his illustrious achievements. It is no small offense to dampen the enthusiasm of a people consolidated into unity by a supreme exigency. At this time to discourse quibbles is to throw the path of justice with fatal torpedoes. Yet the World utters its refrain of censure as an accompaniment to the jeers, the rage, the groans and the curses of the slums. It has no praise for the suppression of the riot, and abundance of objections to the mode in which it was suppressed. In times of almost revolution, plain people fail "to distinguish." Half of New-York and the country sees in the World's studious neglect to commend the putting down of the mob an ill-concealed regret that it was put down at all. This is doubtless unjust; but it is no more unjust than for the journal in question to split hairs on the Governor's action because he made the City authorities right-about-face in the twinkling of an eye. It would have been wise for the Governor to have turned over the whole problem to his dilettante critic, but it and its allies had had the solution of it for a fortnight. They had deduced from it the remarkable conclusion that everybody had a right to parade unless somebody else objected, in which case a count of noses was to determine the matter. If the objectors outnumbered the processionists, the latter had no rights which the officers of the law were bound to respect. The contrast between the Governor's views and the World's was so great that the paper is only restrained by the better part of valor from pilloriying him as the violator and not the vindicator of the laws. As it is, the World succeeds in hinting that it took the Governor into its confidence as the first; that he approved of the Kelsonian anesthetic treatment, and had no right to change the remedies without the consent of the self-constituted original doctor. It then says it the Governor was not aware of the prescription, which it before implied he had helped compound, he should have been; and subsequently states that if the original doctor did not consult with Gov. HOFFMAN, which consultation was previously insinuated, it is the Governor's fault that he did not confer with those who never solicited his advice. This lucid indictment entirely harmonizes with the World's confession that, "We never can think of no more wholesome rule in a great emergency than to express our real sentiments." What those sentiments are, straightly put, would seem to be compounded of an inability to pitch an editorial on Tuesday to the tune of Wednesday's facts. Nevertheless, the discord accomplishes its usual results. It enables the World to do more for its adversaries than they can do for themselves, and to show its failure to commend the principles and measures of the party most embarrassed when trying to square its profession with its performance. By taking it for granted that if Gov. HOFFMAN was in town on Monday, the Superintendent of Police, who did not confer with the Commissioners, must have conferred with him; by deliberately and insultingly ignoring the Executive's statement that on Tuesday he was for the first time apprised of the condition of things in New-York; by a smallness of soul so utter as to cause it to subordinate the public weal to a pride of opinion—the World has indirectly arraigned Mr. HOFFMAN in its own columns, and directly in all the Republican sheets, as the first man to be put at the bar of public judgment—for crushing out in his own way, and with Napoleonic thoroughness, an outbreak which that paper's own temporizing local backers made possible.

American Protestant Association—Card From the Grand Master of Illinois.

The Chicago papers of Thursday morning contain the following:

CHICAGO, July 12.—The fiendish riot at present raging in the City of New-York being truly demonstrative of the intolerant and despotic spirit that has at all times actuated the devoted members of the Roman Catholic Church, it becomes all liberty-loving American Protestants to band themselves together for the purpose of self-defense, so that should their liberties at any time be invaded by intimidation or actual violence, they may be ready for such occasions. The American Protestant Association was organized for such contingencies. We are an independent and truly American Association, and as such invite all Protestants, who are law-abiding citizens, to immediately fraternize with us in upholding the principles guaranteed to us by the genius of our Constitution should they at any time be placed in danger.

LABOR IN CALIFORNIA.

Third Annual Report of the State Labor and Employment Exchanges—Interesting Statistics of Wages, &c.

The California Labor and Employment Exchange held its third annual meeting in San Francisco on the 6th inst., and re-elected its last year's officers. The Secretary read his third annual report, accompanying which was a series of well-compiled statistics of applications and employment found, which the San Francisco Bulletin presents in a condensed form, which we copy below. The following table shows all the different classes of employment which have drawn advantage from the Exchange during the last three years, the number of applications for men in each class during the last year, and also during the last three years, the number of engagements effected through the Exchange during the last year and during the last three years, together with the ruling rate of wages paid each class of employes:
